LYNN GIRL AWARDED PRIZE

Dorothy C. O'Keefe Given $500 for Best Lincoln Essay Written for American

Miss Dorothy C. O'Keefe, of No. 45 Beacon Hill avenue, Lynn, has been awarded the first prize of $500 in the American's contest for the best essay on Abraham Lincoln.

Her paper was adjudged the best of the 7,000 submitted.

These figures show, not only the interest taken by young readers of the paper in the contest, but the difficulty and magnitude of the task confronting the judges. Every paper had to be carefully read, given a preliminary classification, and the many excellent papers submitted had to be re-read many times before the final award was made.

ALL SHOWED ABILITY.

The high quality of the papers in general argues well for the intelligence and scholarship of Greater Boston's school children. While the judges are sorry there were not more prizes to be distributed, there is no doubt that the exercise of research

TRIES TO WED AGAIN; IS PUNISHED TWICE

Stanley Henderski, charged with making a false statement in procuring a marriage license, was today found guilty by Judge Parmenter, and sentenced to six months. On an additional charge of non-support of his wife and two children, who live in Lawrence, he was found guilty. A similar sentence was imposed. Both were suspended and he was ordered to pay his wife $13 a week.

MISSING LYNN GIRLS ARE IN ATLANTIC CITY

The Lynn police today learned that Catherine McIlvray, Louise Brewer and Mrs. Isabelle F. Foss, missing for a week, are in Atlantic City, working as waitresses. Relatives of the two girls will bring them home. Mrs. Foss, a bride of three weeks, will be allowed to do as she pleases.

GERMANS ARE MADE AMERICAN CITIZENS

Naturalization papers were granted today to fifty German and Austrian aliens by Judge Morton of the U. S. District Court. Their application had been made two years before the United States declared war. Among the number were two women, Emma E. Haag and Susanne Hass.

RED SOX SALE IS HELD UP

Lannin Asks for Master to Hear His Claim for $262,000 on Frazee and Ward

Harry H. Frazee, Hugh J. Ward, the Boston American League Baseball Company and the Federal Trust Company were today temporarily enjoined from disposing of any of the common capital stock of the Red Sox Club.

Judge Wait of the Superior Court granted the stay on motion of Joseph J. Lannin of Garden City, L. I.

Mr. Lannin brought the action through his attorneys, Fowler, Bauer & Kenney, in connection with his effort to collect $262,000 which he claims Frazee and Ward owe him on a note now protested.

Another step has been taken which calls for the auction of the capital stock of the Fenway Realty Trust, which owns Fenway Park.

In his application for an injunction Mr. Lannin asked that the Federal Trust Company be enjoined, as he stated on belief that the capital stock of the club had been pledged or hypothecated with the bank in return for loans made. The injunction restrains all from disposing of any of the stock until after arguments are heard on the permanency of the injunction.

The bill asks that a master be appointed to hear testimony and to consider the advisability of ordering the sale of the stock to satisfy the indebtedness which Lannin claims.

Frazee, through his attorney, Thomas Jackson Barry, has claimed that Lannin owes him a considerable sum for bills paid.

TRAINS LOST IN DRIFTS IN CENTRAL WEST

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Buffalo and Western New York was virtually cut off from the rest of the country today as a result of the heavy snow storm and intense cold weather which yesterday and last night swept the eastern half of the United States. Many trains from points East and West were reported lost, others were running from two to eight hours late. All roads early abandoned freight service.

SOMERVILLE MAN STRUCK BY TROLLEY

Struck by an inbound Elevated car as he was crossing Broadway, Somerville, John Fay, forty-eight, of No. 38 Cross street, East Somerville, was taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital today suffering with cuts and bruises.

Don't Blame the Milkman for Being Late

Impassable ruts at Kneeland and South streets are causing mercantile concerns thousands of dollars in loss of time and business and congesting freight at the Boston & Albany Railroad depots on Kneeland and Utica streets. Hundreds of teams and trucks were stalled at this junction today, some of them as long as three hours. The photograph shows some of the difficulties drivers of horse-drawn vehicles have to overcome.

MORE COAL HAS REACHED CITY

Ships Bring Fuel, as Rail Transportation System Is Badly Demoralized

Thirty-three thousand five hundred and thirty tons of coal reached Boston today, despite the extreme cold with consequent ice sheathed rails that disrupted railroad and street railway schedules.

The coal, mostly bituminous, arrived on five steamships and thirteen barges, while several other cargoes en route are expected to reach here within twenty-four hours.

The coal situation remained serious, however, and manufacturers were anxiously awaiting the result of the conference of New England Governors at the State House, at which this question was taken up.

The fears of New England manufacturers were further increased by the prediction of the weather bureau that the present cold snap would continue for several days at least.

The forecast for tonight and Tuesday was continued cold with fresh winds, and slowly rising temperatures on Wednesday.

Transportation by train and trolley was badly hampered by weather conditions today throughout Greater

MAN DIES SUDDENLY IN CHELSEA STATION

A man between fifty-five and sixty, who collapsed at the Boston & Maine station at Heard street, Chelsea, was pronounced dead when taken to the Frost Hospital. He was five feet seven inches tall, of light complexion, gray hair, and blue eyes. He wore a gray cap, brown overcoat, black trousers and overshoes. Papers in his overcoat gave the name of Matthews, General Electric Company, Lynn. An envelope addressed to Miss Hayes and Mrs. Nolan, No. 14 Thatcher street, Boston, was also found.

City Tax Dodgers Make Constables Wealthy

Constables collecting poll taxes are reaping a golden harvest in fees from delinquents. In one month, David Belson of No. 354 Old South Building, says he turned over about $3,000 to the city in taxes. This would make his profit from fees around $1,500, charging each man $1.50. There are about twenty-five constables on the job.

Five constables returned to the City Collector a total of $1,972 on Friday, received from 650 delinquents. Assuming that the constables charged the $1.50 limit in fees, they averaged $294. They report usually twice a week. Taking the returns of the five constables for Friday as a basis on the $1.50 rate, the twenty-five would reap from the delinquents in fees $10,500 in one month, or an average of $1,633 each. And the job has only begun.

City Collector Deland has turned over the entire task of collecting the 1918 poll taxes to a force of constables. So many complaints were received that Mr. Deland set a maximum of $1.50, which they cannot exceed. The constables are expected to charge only $1 to each man, where their efforts require nothing more than to send a letter. But some of them are charging the full limit.

Not only must delinquents pay the original $2 poll tax, but they must pay 75 cents as the cost to the city

$50 a Month for Clancey's Widow

The widow of Patrolman William G. Clancey, who was murdered at Roughan Hall, Charlestown, on January 22, will receive an annuity of $50 a month for life while she remains unmarried, according to the terms of an order sent by Mayor Peters to the City Council today.

This is the maximum amount allowed by law to the widow of a policeman who loses his life in the performance of his duty. Mrs. Elizabeth Butterworth Clancey, the widow, has not yet reached this country from England. There is in the council also an order for an appropriation of $500 for the conviction of the slayer.

COST OF LIVING UP 92 P. C. HERE

Increase Since 1914 in Bay State Is Attributed to the War, in Report

The cost of living has increased 92 per cent. in Massachusetts since 1914, according to the annual report of the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life, filed today with the Legislature.

The report attributes this increase generally to the war, specifically to economic conditions resulting more or less directly from the war, and makes certain recommendations, although stating that legislation alone cannot cure the evil.

The direct causes of the jump in the H. C. L. are grouped under five heads: The law of supply and demand, which the war wastage, loss of production, extravagant expenditures, foreign exports and imports; currency expansion and the inflation of credit; increased cost of production; increased taxation, and profiteering.

The commission recommends that local boards of health be empowered to compel landlords to furnish heat and repairs in reasonable degree; that cities and towns be allowed full authority to establish public markets; that a closer supervision of the storage of foodstuffs be maintained; that local standard weights of bread and of the bushel box for farm products be established; that the State enter upon a reforestation program, and that the commission be allowed to continue its investigation of the profits of industrial corporations.

BAR VEHICLES FROM TROLLEY RESERVATIONS

Drivers of trucks and other vehicles who have been using the street car reservations during the past few weeks now are liable to arrest. Police orders which permitted their using them have been countermanded. The thaw resulted in the sinking of the roadbeds and exposure of the cross bars. Trucks and autos passing over them have resulted in their being started out of gauge and further traffic over them would bring serious consequences.

URGE WILSON TO RETAIN PAYNE AS SHIPPING HEAD

Washington, Feb. 16.—Members of the Senate Commerce Committee today petitioned President Wilson to continue Chairman Payne in his present position as head of the Shipping Board for at least four months. Chairman Payne was recently nominated by President Wilson for Secretary of the Interior. Members of the committee urge that the chairman of the board should not be changed until Congress has fixed a definite policy on the merchant marine.

BANDITS HOLD AMERICAN

Carranza Troops Pursue Gang That Kidnaped Wilson W. Adams

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Wilson W. Adams, an American citizen, was kidnaped by Mexican bandits on the night of February 13 and is held for 50,000 pesos ransom, the State Department was advised today.

The kidnaping occurred at Avalos, State of Zapatecas. Adams has a wife and child living in Los Angeles.

Three columns of Federal troops are reported to be in pursuit of the bandits.

The American embassy at Mexico City has been instructed and has taken steps to secure the release of Adams and the apprehension of his captors.

Adams was superintendent of the Providencia Mines, operated by the Minerals & Metals Company of Monterey, an American concern.

The bandits are also reported to have looted the warehouses of the mining concern.

FINED BY ROXBURY COURT FOR GAMING

Twenty-four men were arraigned before Judge Hayden in Roxbury court today charged with being present where gaming implements were found. Sixteen were arrested in the rooms of the Warren Associates, on Washington street. They were fined each $3. Eight were arrested at the Adams A. A. in Roxbury. They were fined $5 each, but all appealed.

ACTION TIES HANDS OF SHIP BOARD

Washington, Feb. 16.—Sale of the thirty former German ships by the Shipping Board was blocked by the Senate this afternoon. Without a roll-call the Senate adopted the McKellar resolution requiring the sale of the ships be postponed until authorized by Congress.

The resolution also instructs the Shipping Board to make a full report to Congress of the circumstances surrounding its proposal to auction off the ships to the International Mercantile Marine for $28,000,000.

Ashurst Leads in Opposition to Prevent Sale

Washington, Feb. 16.—Charging that Great Britain is interfering with and ignoring the Monroe doctrine by preventing the sailing from Buenos Ayres, Argentina, of the former German ship Bahia Blanca, loaded with cargo for the United States, because of a claim to ownership of the vessel, Representative Britten, Republican, of Illinois, today introduced a resolution in the House demanding an investigation of the matter by the State Department.

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 16.—"So that the country may know the Shipping Board is attempting to sell ships worth at least $250,000,000 to the Morgan interests, the International Mercantile Marine, for about $28,000,000," Senator Ashurst of Arizona urged in the Senate this afternoon that Congress take immediate steps to prevent the thirty seized German ships "from being knocked down for a song to private interests flying the British flag."

Ashurst accused Senator Jones, Republican, of Washington, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, "of standing in the way" of Congressional action to defeat the "bargain sale" of the Leviathan and other former ex-German ocean liners.

Jones was severely criticized by Ashurst when he blocked unanimous consent for immediate consideration of Ashurst's resolution to require the Shipping Board to advertise the sale of the ships for three months and then only to dispose of them with the approval and consent of Congress.

ATTEMPTS TO DEFEND PAYNE.

Jones' attempt to defend John Barton Payne, chairman of the Shipping Board, was swept aside by Ashurst, who warned him the "American people were sick and tired of having Congress take orders from the admin-

Bids Received Are Rejected by the Government

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Justice Bailey of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia will hand down a decision on Friday on the petition of William Randolph Hearst for an injunction against the sale by the Shipping Board of the former German fleet.

Judge C. B. Ames, assistant attorney-general, argued for the defense of the United States Shipping Board this afternoon, when Justice McCoy heard arguments on the bill for an injunction.

Answering the contention by the plaintiff that his rights as a taxpayer would be injured by the sale of the ships, Judge Ames declared that a private citizen has no right to interfere with the orderly operation of a law so long as he is not damaged.

There was spirited bidding for certain groups of the former German liners at today's action sale by General George W. Goethals, representing the American Ship & Commerce Corporation, and F. A. S. Franklin, representing the International Mercantile Marine.

As the bids were not satisfactory, in the principal group, the government indicated the high one of $22,-500,000 offered by Franklin, would not be accepted and there would be a regrouping of the ships.

General Goethals offered a lump sum of $10,000,000 for the George Washington, Martha Washington, America, President Grant, Naushmond and Callao, for the Hamburg mail liners service.

The bid was promptly raised to $10,500,000 by Franklin. Both bidders stipulated that $2,500,000 would be in cash on delivery of the ships, the balance to be in equal periods over a period of ten years, the Callao to be delivered after she is reconditioned by the Shipping Board.

General Goethal then raised his bid to $10,750,000, whereupon Mr. Franklin raised his to $10,850,000. The successive bids then were as follows:

Goethals, $11,000,000; Franklin

Goethals and Franklin Offer Millions for Principal Group

$11,100,000; Goethals, $11,250,000; Franklin, $11,350,000; Goethals, $11,500,000; Franklin, $11,600,000.

A final bid of $11,100,000 was offered by Franklin.

General Goethals stated that his bids would include repairs on the Martha Washington at the expense of the Shipping Board. Franklin made the same stipulation.

Commissioner Scott stated that repairs on the Martha Washington were started on February 1 and that the estimated cost would be $1,415,554.

Franklin asked if there was any likelihood of the Shipping Board competing in the German-Hamburg service. Commissioner Scott said he thought it was not likely that there would be any such competition. Commissioner Stevens said that of course the board could give no assurances as to this competition, adding:

"You'll have to trust to the government's sense of fair play in this matter."

ONE CONDITIONAL BID.

A conditional bid was offered by the International Mercantile Marine, for the Leviathan, George Washington, America, President Grant, Mannemond, Antigone, Pocahontas, Princess Matoika and the Calluo, of $14,050,000, 25 per cent. of which will be cash.

Through Franklin, this company suggested that the Southampton services for which these ships are offered be changed to the United Kingdom and Continental service. Among the conditions were that the Shipping Board do not compete in this service, that the time of the ships be protected.

Among the ports that would be covered by this service are Southampton, Cherbourg, Havre, Hamburg, Antwerp and Bremen.

Of the nine ships bid on by this company, five, the America, President Grant, Antigone, Pocahontas and Princess Matoika are now in the hands of the War Department.

Acting Chairman Scott stated that the Shipping Board believed that the War Department would soon release these vessels.

The announcement of the bids was made coincidentally with an announcement that President Wilson will within forty-eight hours answer the Senate resolution regarding his alleged secret bargain with Great Britain as to the terms of sale.

Commissioner Scott announced that the top prices received by the Shipping Board under its call for sealed proposals for the purchase of the ex-German liners were as follows:

Amphion $512,450; Black Arrow, $925,000; Philippines, no bid; Princess Matoika, $1,125,000; Pocahontas, $1,425,000; Aeolus, $1,046,160; De Kalb, $613,790; Moccasin $850,000; Otsego, no bid; Leviathan, $4,000,000; Mt. Vernon, $1,250,000; Agamemnon, no bid; Manesmond, $960,000; Antigone, $1,200,000; President Grant, $2,250,000; Susquehanna, $600,000; Artemis, $1,000,000; George Washington, $2,000,000; Martha Washington, $2,180,000; Von Steuben, $727,820; America, $2,300,000; Powhatan, no bid; Madawaska, $1,000,000.

These prices, it was pointed out, are not auction bids. They are the bids received under the call for sealed proposals.

New Hampshire Men Opposed to Sale

Concord, N. H., Feb. 16.—New Hampshire Representatives express themselves as follows on the proposed sale of the German fleet:

ROBERT W. BROWN, Representative, Concord—Reading the reports, I should say the administration is carrying out its usual policy—giving away public property for nothing.

FREDERICK A. JORDAN, Representative, Concord—I do not think the ships should be sold, but if they are to be sold, it seems to me that the selling price of the Shipping Board is too low.

WILLIAM A. LEE, Representative, Concord—If the government is going to sell the ships it should make sure that it gets every penny they are worth.

OLIVER MARVIN, State Senator, Portsmouth—I have no objection to the sale of the ships, but I believe they should not be sold to any other nation. If these ships are to be sold it should be so designated that they should be sold to an American concern.

Resolution Protests Sale of Big Liners

Editor American:

The following resolution was adopted at the meeting of the Cleveland Club of Charlestown, protesting against the sale of former German liners to the English interests:

"Whereas, the United States Shipping Board proposes to sell to English controlled interest many former German liners now under the United States flag, and,

"Whereas, we believe such action to be inimical to American shipping interest and to the upbuilding of a permanent merchant marine flying the American flag, be it

"Resolved, That we vigorously protest such proposed action as being unpatriotic and un-American. That we strongly indorse the patriotic position of William Randolph Hearst in exposing and opposing this outrageous scheme.

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the Massachusetts Senators in Washington, and the three Boston Congressmen and to the press.

Very truly yours,
J. J. KENNEDY.

Maine Legislators Condemn Sale of Ships

LOUIS HIGGINS, President of the Maine Senate, Brewer, Maine—I certainly do not believe that this country should sell its American ships. The opportunity was never ripe to build up our merchant marine.

LOUIS BRAND, Representative, Lewiston, Maine—I believe this country needs all the ships it can get.

CHARLES E. GURNEY, Senator, Cumberland County, Maine—I can't believe that there can be much sincerity in selling these German ships at this time. Now is the opportunity to build up the American Merchant Marine and we should not lose it.

JOHN M. GOOGIN, Senator, Androscoggin County, Maine—It strikes me that this country should consider the proposition of disposing of these German ships in a careful manner. I certainly favor a full investigation.

EDWARD R. PARENT, Senator, Androscoggin County, Maine — Why should this country allow those ships to be sold and to fly the flag of a foreign power when we need the ships at home?

CORNELIUS J. O'LEARY, Representative, Bangor, Me.—Why should the United States hurry in the sale of the German ships? An investigation will do no harm.

LAWRENCE V. GOWEN, Representative, Bangor, Me.—A thorough investigation ought to be made by Congress or some other body before the entire fleet of German ships is sold.

W. SCOTT REED, Representative, Bangor, Me.—I believe always that in matters of great importance a state or a nation ought to move slowly and should not act as in the case of the sale of the German ships without careful deliberation.

ALBERT L. MURCH, Representative, Bangor, Me.—By all means an investigation of the sale of the German fleet should be made. There ought not to be any particular hurry on this matter and an investigation might bring out something of great interest to this country.

WALLACE E. SANBORN, Representative, Vinal. Me.—Now is the opportunity for this nation to build up its merchant marine and I do not think the ships ought to be sold. certainly not unless they will fly the American flag.

FRED L. MASON, Representative, Ellsworth, Me.—I honestly believe that the German ships ought to be retained by American owners and sail under the American flag.

MIGHTY PROTEST OF SHIP SALE

New York, Feb. 16.—After sending a telegram to President Wilson protesting against the sale of the seized German ships, officials of the Central Federated Union stated that similar action would be taken by Central labor bodies generally in the country.

Four million members of the American Federation of Labor, they said, would unite in a national protest against the sale of the German ships and that the farmers and other organizations with more than 3,000,000 members would be asked to take similar action.

I appeal to the members of Congress to use their influence with President Wilson to halt the proposed sale of thirty former German ships.

Further, I petition that there be a most thorough and full investigation of every important fact covering the proposed sale. This investigation should most thoroughly probe the report that the Shipping Board plans to sell these ships, including some of the largest and finest steamships afloat, for $28,000,000, which is declared to be but one-third of their real value.

I desire to ask why cannot the government itself operate these fine ships rather than sacrifice two-thirds of their value?

istration and the government departments."

Jones urged that Payne had promised the Senate Commerce Committee that the ship sale "will not be perfected until Congress has approved the sale."

Payne was to reappear before the committee tomorrow, Jones said. Until the committee had "gone thoroughly into the matter," the Senate might rest assured the sale of the ships would not be consummated.

"The committee is only a creation, a child of the Senate," Ashurst replied. "What the committee may or may not do is not what I'm concerned with. I am of the opinion that it is the sense of the Senate that the ships should not be sold. Why, therefore, delay action in the matter?

"Congress is today in the doldrums, in the perilous position that has resulted from its having taken orders too long from the administration, from the government departments.

"It is time we realized that the American people do not want Congress to take orders any longer from the great departments; that when Congress yields its untrammeled judgment to that of department and bureau heads Congress is failing into a dangerous pit."

CHARGES OPPOSITION.

"We on the Democratic side, who are trying to stay the hand of the administration in this matter, regret the Republican side should be trying to prevent our efforts to prevent the sale of these ships."

"I think I can agree with every word the Senator from Arizona says, except his suggestion that the Republican side of this chamber is standing in the way of Congressional action in this matter," Jones said.

"I will then withdraw what I have said and say that it seems to me the chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee is seeking to stay our hands in this matter," was Ashurst's rejoinder.

Jones denied the truth of Ashurst's assertion, explaining that Payne had promised the sale of the ships would not be perfected until the Senate Commerce Committee had investigated the situation and Congress had signified its wishes in the matter.

U. S. Flag Not Specified in Proposals for Ships

Here are the conditions in the Shipping Board's proposals for bids for the thirty ex-German steamships:

"Proposals will be received by the United States Shipping Board at Washington, D. C., up to, and including January 20, 1920, for any or all of the passenger ships, a list of which is attached; said proposals to be accompanied by certified check for 2½ per cent. of the total amount bid. Bids to be on either lump sum per ship or per gross ton basis.

"The following information should accompany all bids:

"1—Trade or service in which ships will be placed if bid is accepted.

"2—Such assurance as may be possible that service will be permanent.

"3—The amount of United States tonnage now owned by bidder.

"4—Percentage of foreign ownership or interest in partnership, company or corporation bidding.

"5—Foreign interest in bid, if any.

"6—Particulars of fitness of bidder for proposed service.

"All bids to be based on taking title of ships 'as is' it being understood and agreed that any commitments of the Shipping Board, involving operation, repairs or alterations will be subject to further negotiations.

"Bidders will state definitely terms upon which payment or payments will be made, it being understood that the bill of sale shall not be delivered until at least 25 per cent. of the total purchase price shall have been paid.

"In the event that the bid is accepted by the board and the board stands ready and willing to deliver bill of sale, and the bidder is in default, the Shipping Board shall retain the 2½ per cent. as liquidated damages.

"The board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

"All bids should be addressed to the Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, Washington, D. C., and marked 'Proposal for purchase passenger ships.'

"Action may be expected first meeting of Shipping Board after January 20, 1920."

Jones objected, however, to immediate consideration of the Ashurst resolution, and it went over under the rules of the Senate.

The "Mad Mullah" Stirs Abyssinia

By International News Service.

London, Feb. 16.—Grave unrest prevails in Abyssinia, where the "Mad Mullah" is preaching a Holy War on behalf of the Sultan of Turkey. The Daily News gave a prominent place to this news, declaring that developments make it imperative to rush peace with Turkey. The Pall Mall Gazette says that while the Sultan probably will remain in Constantinople he will be shorn of practically all of his army.

TWO WHISKEY THIEVES SLAIN

Clubman and Aide Wounded in Battle to Death at Sound Beach Cottage, Ct.

Sound Beach, Ct., Feb. 16.—Two burglars were shot to death in a pistol battle while seeking liquor in the cellar of a palatial Summer home at Rocky Point, and the two wealthy men who first cornered and then shot them were painfully wounded.

The men slain, it was learned today, were Anthony Forlonzo, aged twenty-five, and Giavonni Noresa, thirty-nine. Both men boarded with Mrs. Annie Pluto of No. 16 Hazel street, Stamford, Conn.

Mrs. W. Dreyer's attention was attracted to the burglary when she was awakened by the sound of gullinering glass in the adjoining Summer home of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Morris. She telephoned the fire house.

Two wealthy members of the volunteer fire department heard the call as they were leaving the house after a meeting. Major Alden L. McMurtry of the Connecticut State police, son of Mrs. George G. McMurtry of No. 813 Fifth avenue, New York, and Addison Bacon, rich clubman arming themselves with automatics and extra cartridge clips, sprang into an automobile and speeded to the Morris estate.

$2,500 REWARD OFFERED FOR CAPTURE OF MILFORD MAN'S SLAYER

DRAIN POND IN SEARCH OF CLEW

Police Inclined to Believe That John F. Barry Was Poisoned

Milford, Feb. 16.—Rewards totalling $2,500 were offered today for the arrest of the person or persons responsible for the murder of John Barry, whose body was found in Round Pond, Saturday, with hands and feet tied. The town offers $1,000, Milford Council, Knights of Columbus, $1,000, and the Milford Catholic Order of Foresters, $500.

Both the State and local police have thus far been unable to obtain a tangible clew as to the supposed slayer. The police today directed the draining of Round Pond in hopes that they might find some clew that might aid them.

Examination of Barry's stomach and blood tests were completed today.

The police are also working on the supposition that Barry possibly went to visit a friend, that drinks were served that contained wood alcohol or other forms of poison, and that when the supposed slayer discovered that Barry had died he tried to hide the fact by hiding the body. According to the police the body was taken to Round Pond after 1 o'clock Saturday morning.

Although Barry had not been working since his return to Milford, January 18, it is known that he carried considerable money on his person. When his body was discovered only 11 cents and two keys were found.

The funeral was held from the family residence, No. 19 Carroll street, today. High mass at St. Mary's Church was said by the Rev. David F. McGrath, who, during the service, requested all the parishioners to pray that the murderer may be brought to justice. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Milford.

FORBIDS MINORS TO ENTER POOL ROOMS

John E. Cassidy and Harry A. Neud, young minors, were forbidden to enter pool or billiard rooms in that city until March 2, 1921, by the Lynn Court today. The boys were charged with larceny and receiving stolen property respectively, in connection with the theft of a watch. This watch was sold for $4.25, and Cassidy charged with the stealing, received twenty-five cents for his share. The boys were arrested in a pool room. They were placed on probation.

APPEALS FINE FOR BEATING HORSE

Found guilty of cruelly beating a horse over the head with the butt of a whip Lifera Purbush of East Seventh street, South Boston, was fined $30 by Judge Logan today. Purbush was engaged in snow removal work in Columbia road when his horse was unable to move the load. Patrolman Hyde of the City Point Station testified that the man then proceeded to beat the horse with the whip. He appealed the sentence.

Y. M. H. A. ON SECOND WEEK OF ITS DRIVE

With its campaign forces more than doubled, the Young Men's Hebrew Association started the second week of its drive for $100,000 today, with the determination not to quit until the amount sought for has been raised. Less than half the amount required to build a gymnasium and swimming pool was subscribed in the first week of the campaign owing to the bad weather.

CARRIER PIGEON HAS HARD FIGHT WITH GULLS

The fishing trawler Sea Bird brought a carrier pigeon into port today. It came aboard while the vessel was 170 miles out on the Banks. It had been chased by gulls and was exhausted. On its band was the legend OFR, 282, 1915. When released at 7 o'what the bird flew away in a westerly direction.

POINT FOR BURKE IN EVIDENCE

Government Witness Sets Up Probable Time of Death and Moving of Body

Skowhegan, Me., Feb. 16.—A point was scored for the defence today in the trial of John A. Burke, charged with the murder of Nelson W. Bartley, when Dr. J. M. Boothby, medical examiner, testified under cross-examination that Bartley in all probability had been dead at least two hours before his body was found in the natural cave, where it was found three days after his disappearance.

His testimony centred around the position of the man's left arm. It was in a rigid condition in such a position. No such object, he said, was found in the cave. Blood outside the cave, he said, evidently showed where Bartley lay after he was shot.

This evidence may bear out the contention of the defence that Bartley's body was hidden several hours after death.

Burke was in Jackman at 9:30 the night of the alleged murder, witnesses claim, and it is evident that the defence is endeavoring to show that the accused man could not have shot his partner, hidden the body and returned to the village by that time.

Several witnesses scheduled to be called today were delayed from reaching court when the train carrying them from Waterville ran off the track.

Experts at Odds Over Wilson's Brain

President Wilson's mentality is keen." "The President has a permanently damaged brain."

These are the conflicting statements of two experts on President Wilson's condition. The first statement was made by Dr. Francis X. Dercum, eminent nerve specialist and alienist, who has been treating the President for six months. The second statement is that of Dr. Arthur D. Bevan, surgeon, former president of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Dercum expressed reluctance to talk, and made his statement only when urged. You force me to say that the President's mentality is today keen," said he. "Should I follow my inclination and habit of not discussing Mr. Wilson's condition, it would immediately be concluded that his condition was not satisfactory. That is just the impression I do not wish to create."

Dr. Bevan says:

"The President's stroke, with the resulting paralysis of one side of his body, is due to a disease of the arteries of his brain. The disease of the arteries is permanent and not a temporary condition. He is evidently slowly recovering from the paralysis of his arm and leg, and may recover fairly well, although never completely, the use of his limbs, but the diseased arteries which were responsible for the stroke and the mental derangement remain and will not be recovered from.

"A patient who is suffering as the President is should under no circumstances be permitted to resume the work of such a strenuous position as that of President of the United States. The strain and responsibility of such a position would bring with them the danger of a recurrence of such attacks, and might hasten a fatal termination. The proper and normal course of action would be for the President to retire from office under the advice of his physicians and family and friends.

"This whole matter is of such transcendent importance that it should be handled in an entirely impersonal and non-partisan way."

President Wilson may express himself soon on the action taken by the allies in asking for the extradition of the Kaiser. It has been suggested at the White House that the President may take occasion of the Crown Prince's cablegram, offering himself as a "victim," to let the world know that he is not in favor of criminal prosecution of German leaders.

On this point it is understood that he and former Secretary Lansing were in accord. However, it is declared that Mr. Lansing took no action to protest against the action of the allies, and it is probable that the President will at least let his dissent be known.

MAY WITHDRAW U. S. FORCES

Wilson Threatens to Take Patrol From Adriatic Unless He Is Heard on Fiume

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 16.—President Wilson threatened to withdraw American forces now policing the Adriatic, in his protest to Great Britain and France over the proposed settlement of the Adriatic problem, it was learned today.

The protest, it is understood, declared that the United States must be given a voice in the Fiume question or withdraw its forces now along the Adriatic.

Reports from Paris were "exasperated," it was officially admitted today. The White House let it be known that the President did not threaten to withdraw from further conferences of the Supreme Council, but merely asked to be heard in the Adriatic question.

MANDELL BURIED AT MT. AUBURN

Funeral of Publisher and Merchant Held at Arlington Street Church

The funeral of Samuel Pierce Mandell, long-time president of the Boston Transcript Company and aged merchant, was held this afternoon at the Arlington Street Church. Relatives and friends who had been associated with Mr. Mandell during his seventy-two years with C. F. Hovey & Company, and during his nearly a half century as the president of the Transcript, and friends in the Merchants Club, Algonquin Club, Union Club, and other organizations of which he was a member, made up the congregation at the church.

The ushers, who were in charge of J. Tracy Eustis, a nephew of Mr. Mandell, included Theodore Jones of Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Company, Samuel Johnson and Theodore H. Bartlett, for many years connected with C. F. Hovey & Co., Henry Taggard and Louis M. Hammond, business manager of the Transcript. There were no pallbearers.

Rev. Eugene R. Shippen, minister of the Second Church, conducted the services. The regular choir sang three hymns: "Jerusalem the Golden," "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Rock of Ages." The body was taken to Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

During the hour of the funeral the Transcript office and the Hovey store were closed.

CHURCHMEN FOR SUNDAY BALL

Backers of Movement Get Aid of Congregational Moral Committee

The moral and social welfare committee of the State Association of Congregational Churches joined the supporters of Sunday amateur baseball today when it went on record with the Legal Affairs Committee of the Legislature as favoring the games.

Rev. William W. Patten, representing the church committee, told the legislators that six of the ten of the majority of them would limit athletic games to those where no admission is charged, but others would permit professional entertainments. Representative Lawrence C. Dunn read a telegram in the committee from the Holyoke Chamber of Commerce, placing the 1,300 members of that organization on record in favor of Sunday baseball.

E. T. Hartman, representing the Massachusetts Civic League, declared that Sunday sports would furnish thousands of Massachusetts people with healthy recreation. Thirty-five million dollars is expended every year in the State, he said, for the promotion of health, but most of it, he declared, went to "patch up" those arrested in these clean Sunday sports would eliminate the cause of this condition. Opponents of the bill to legalize Sunday sports were: Mayor Perry D. Thompson of Lowell, Horace Guild of Boston, and Senator Nason of Haverhill.

State representatives, business men and officials of athletic unions spoke in favor of legalized Sunday baseball.

The law forbidding Sunday baseball was condemned as class legislation. It was pointed out that the amusements of the wealthy, motoring and golfing, were not interfered with.

Opponents of any modification of the Sunday laws were present in force. They took copious notes, and will be heard later.

President Cuddy of the New England Athletic Union favored Sunday baseball, but would not indorse Sunday boxing.

MORE LAWYERS FOR GERMAN WAR GULPRITS

Berlin, Feb. 16.—The Ministry of Justice announced today that additional lawyers have been sent to Leipzig to deal with the prosecution of German war culprits by the new supreme court. It is before this court that the German government insists upon trying the officers accused by the allies instead of surrendering them for trial in allied courts.

GENERAL STRIKE PLANS GO ON

Railroad Unions Will Go Out if Wage Tribunal Plan Is Rejected

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The railroad unions are prepared to put in motion machinery for calling a general railroad strike in event the proposition of President Wilson for a wage tribunal is rejected. At a meeting of the chairmen, representing the workers in all organizations, to be held here February 23, all unions which have not taken a strike vote on wage demands will do so, it was learned today.

Labor leaders emphasize that only the immediate danger of a strike is passed. The situation remains serious and the crisis will not be over until after the meeting of the representatives of the men.

J. B. Malloy, grand vice-president of the railway shop laborers, has gone to Detroit to confer with President Allan E. Baker. It is believed that the maintenance of way men, if it is decided to carry out their strike plans after the February meeting, will walk until the railroads are under private control.

SCIENTISTS FILE NEW MOTION

Ask That Judge Dodge Be Directed to Hear All Evidence in Dittemore Suit

Counsel for the directors of the Christian Science Church have filed a motion in the Supreme Court asking that Judge Frederic Dodge, the master appointed to hear and determine the facts in controversy, be directed to hear all the evidence in the suit of John V. Dittemore, who claims to have been illegally removed as a director on March 17, 1919.

Judge Dodge, after a full hearing in the case of Herbert W. Eustace and the other trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Company against Adam H. Dickey and the other directors of the church, decided that it was not necessary to hear further testimony in the Dittemore case, as the issues involved had been settled by the facts brought out in the suit of the trustees against the directors.

The directors say that material evidence was withheld by them to be offered in the Dittemore case.

of making out the warrants, etc., plus 15 cents interest, making $2.90 which the city receives. Then the constables are allowed to tack on $1.50.

The warrants are being made out by the thousands. It is the intention of the city tax collector to make out a warrant for every assessed man who has not paid. Every man who receives a warrant notice from a constable must pay the constable a fee. The tax cannot be paid at City Hall, except by those who have not yet received a constable's notice.

Already 47,000 warrants have been made out and it is planned to make out some 25,000 more. During the year 1918 224,461 men were assessed for a total of $449,922, and up to February 12 last 88,421 had paid $176,840, or 39 per cent.

This leaves 136,040 who had not paid. Allowance must be made for some 30,000 men who were in the service. Service men are exempt from poll taxes for 1917, 1918 and 1919. This leaves 106,040. Additional allowance must be made for deaths and removals from the State.

Roughly, 75,000 warrants will be issued. The exact number depends upon the speed at which delinquents pay their tax before the constables send them a notice.

During January $14,450 of the 1918 tax was paid and this figure should be materially increased this month. The constables did not get under way until about the middle of January.

The five constables who reported Friday were Joseph F. Cutter, William Colcoya, Benjamin F. Powell, David Belsen and Louis F. Fernald. These five turned over $1,972, which would be the returns from 680 delinquents.

Janitor Gambles as Fires Go Out

Engrossed in a 10-cent limit poker game, the janitor of an apartment house at Chestnut street and Westland avenue, Lynn, allowed his fires to go out, causing the occupants to suffer from the cold.

The police were notified and arrested six men. The janitor had been "cleaned out" before their arrival, however, and was hiding his sorrow in a coal bin.

BIG HAVERHILL PLANT TO LOCATE IN ATHOL

Haverhill, Feb. 16.—W. E. Bixby & Co., one of the largest heel and leather concerns in the East, announce that they will remove a part of their business to Athol where a new factory has been secured.

ULSTER ATTACK ON CATHOLICS

Rev. Edward Hazleton Says Church Aims to Dominate Irish and U. S. Politics

An attack upon the Roman Catholic Church, as being ambitious to dominate not only the politics of Ireland, but those of America also, was made today by Rev. Edward Hazleton, member of the delegation of Ulster ministers led by William Coote, M. P.

The meeting at Park Street Church was attended by ministers of various denominations, and by many women.

"Ulster will never be handed over to the rule of Sinn Fein and of Rome," Hazleton declared. "I am sorry to say," he continued, "that they have joined hands—the Sinn Fein and the Church of Rome.

"Even in the United States, the Roman Church is attempting to dominate national affairs. The motto of Sinn Fein, 'Ourselves Alone,' is the same as that of the Church of Rome.

"The Catholic church is like Feinthrough and through. It has ceased to be inspirational, and is now a political institution, ever seeking to push forward temporal aggression not only in Ireland, but elsewhere. The Church of Rome would drive the last remnant of Protestantism out of this country and Ireland, if they possessed the power to do so."

Hazelton, pastor of a Belfast Presbyterian church, was the third speaker, all being introduced by Dr. Addison, pastor of the Park Street Church. They united in referring to England as the "mother country," and expressed desire to see "the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes forever intertwined."

They hotly assailed De Valera and other representatives of the Sinn Fein.

Rev. Louis W. Crooks of the North Bridge Presbyterian Church, Belfast, said: "It is a foul, infamous lie to say that Britain is crushing Ireland under its feet. Ireland has far too many representatives in the British House of Commons today."

SEES CHINA AS BIG POWER IN WORLD

"Ninety-five per cent. of the Chinese can neither read nor write their own or any other language," said James H. Lewis, addressing the College of Business Administration mass meeting for the Boston University-Nanking Association of today, which began today. "Within ten years the great mass of unwieldy Chinese will be ready to take their place of power in the world," he prophesied. "China will be a dominant, if not the dominant power in the world. America has the opportunity to shape the ideals of the Chinese."

26 MEN ARE FINED IN GAMBLING RAIDS

After a raid early Sunday morning on an Appleton street house by Captain John Driscoll of the East Dedham street station, eight men were arrested, charged with being present where gambling implements were found. They were fined $3 each. A raid on a club at the corner of Washington and Dover streets resulted in the arrest of eighteen men, charged with gambling on the Lord's Day. They also paid fines of $3 each.

Kahn's Daughter to Wed Major

Photograph by Michlin Studio.

MISS MAUDE KAHN.

New York, Feb. 16.—The engagement of Miss Maude Kahn, daughter of Otto H. Kahn, the banker, to Major John Charles Oakes Marriott, member of the staff of the military attache of the British Embassy, is announced by Mr. and Mrs. Kahn.

Major Marriott is only twenty-five and is said to be the youngest major in the British army. He has been awarded the D. S. C., the Military Order and the Croix de Guerre of Belgium. He met Miss Kahn for the first time at her father's home in this city after the war. Friends say it was a case of love at first sight.

MORE COAL HAS REACHED CITY

Bigger Supply Is Expected to Help Relieve Acute Situation Here

Boston, and thousands of commuters were late for work as a result. 250 "E" CARS DISABLED.

Statements were issued by both the Elevated and Eastern Massachusetts Street Railways, to the effect that the service was suffering severely from the weather, but that every effort was being made to cope with the difficulties. The Elevated stated that nearly 250 of its cars are disabled at present, and that there are approximately 900 men still engaged in the removal of snow and ice.

Schedules which had but recently returned to normal after the blizzard were disrupted and delayed and stalled trains and delayed electric cars.

A four-car Bedford-to-Boston local on the Lexington branch of the Boston & Maine, left the rails on the banks of Spy Pond, near the Lake street station, Arlington.

The heavily-loaded cars and engine slid over onto the outward tracks, retaining their upright position, but causing a blockade that continued for hours.

GO TO ELEVATED.

The passengers, who were frightened and somewhat shaken up walked through to Massachusetts avenue and forced their way aboard already overcrowded Elevated cars, shortly after 6 o'clock.

A Boston bound train arriving at the Farm Hill station on the Stoneham branch of the Boston & Maine, Southern division, was stalled by the ice. The town of Stoneham furnished a dozen pickaxes with which trainmen and volunteers freed the rails from their slippery covering, after a delay of one and a half hours.

Elevated schedules were far from normal, particularly on the North Cambridge - Arlington line, where many persons walked to the Harvard square subway station.

FORCED TO WALK AGAIN.

The Bay State Railway service in Lynn and between Lynn and Revere was demoralized by ice-covered tracks. Hundreds of residents of Revere and Chelsea who are employed at the plant of the General Electric Company were forced to walk five miles to work because of inability of the cars to run.

The marsh road between Lynn and Revere was literally a field of ice as a result of a high tide which washed over the road after 7 o'clock Sunday night. The water began to freeze shortly before midnight.

Fifty men were kept at work all night by the Bay State Railway company with plows in an effort to clear the tracks. Early in the day they were relieved by a fresh crew. In Lynn six cars were kept in operation on the short lines.

WEARY RED DEER IS SEEN IN WOBURN

A red doe, the first to be seen in the vicinity for a long time, ran close to the farm of Sumner A. Spencer, on the west side of Woburn. It had apparently run for a long distance. The deer waded an open stream for several hundred yards and then ran in the direction of Winchester.

Female of the Species About to Rule U. S.

New York, Feb. 16.—The feminine cycle is again approaching and more men must return once more to a place of secondary importance. For the female of the species—but let Mrs. Nellie B. Van Slingerland, president of the Daughters of Michigan explain.

"The present cycle must install a matriarchy to exercise a protectorate over the male population," she tells an anxious world. "The male population," she added, "seems to have lost all sense of civilization and to have reverted many degrees below the savage."

Mrs. Slingerland announced the launching of a movement to inaugurate a matriarchal form of government. There would be a woman President and women at the heads of all important departments of state.

NOVELTY TO FEATURE FRANKLIN HOUSE DRIVE

A get-together meeting of the Franklin Square House clean-up campaign workers who are helping to raise $140,000 resulted in new plans for the big drive.

The hundreds of Franklin Square House girls helping will now seek contributions with coupon books. Possible contributors will be asked to sign a coupon agreeing to take shares of "good will" in the house indicated in the coupon as "The House That Love Built." Later a certificate for as many shares of "good will" as dollars have been subscribed will be sent to each contributor.

This New and Modern Candy Antiseptic Is Better for Women

Why New and Modern Candy is Sometimes Better for Women than Old-Fashioned Medicine

How much easier and pleasanter it is to take medicine, when necessary, in an agreeable form. Every woman appreciates the pleasing and exquisite peppermint flavor of after-dinner mints. Partola mint candies are the ideal laxative and internal antiseptic for women. They are but the purest mint candies with laxative and antiseptic virtues added and without the slightest "medicine taste."

They do all that any laxative can do and are mild and pleasant but thoroughly effective in their action. They leave no unpleasant or weakening after-effects. In addition to their laxative action they possess very valuable antiseptic properties which tend to sterilize and disinfect the whole digestive tract and help give protection against the millions of disease germs which medical experts admit breed in this tract.

It is this double purpose of Partola which makes it far more valuable than other laxatives. It is not to be confused with ordinary laxatives and there is nothing "just the same" or "just as good."

Go to your druggist today and get a package of Partola and keep it in the home at all times. All good druggists sell Partola in 25c, 50c and $1.00 boxes.

Eats Candy but Loses Her Fat

Here's joyful news for every flashy person who loves good things to eat, especially those who are denying themselves the things they like most because of their desire to keep down their weight or to reduce the fat with which they are already burdened.

The famous Marmola Prescription has been put up in convenient tablet form and is now sold by druggists everywhere at only one dollar per large case. To get rid of fat at the rate of two to four pounds a week, simply take one of these little tablets after each meal and at bedtime until you have reduced your weight to where you want it. No wrinkles or flabbiness will remain to show where the fat once off.

Simply use Marmola Prescription Tablets according to directions; they are harmless, free from poisonous or injurious drugs and can be used with perfect safety. Try them for just a few weeks and get results without going through long siege of tiresome exercises and starvation diet. Get them at any good drug store or send price direct to Marmola Company, 964 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., and a full week's package will be mailed to you direct in plain wrapper and post-paid.—Advertisement.

LEGION'S WASON BILL TEST OF SOLONS' FRIENDSHIP

This is the fourth of a series of articles of unusual appeal to every ex-service man and woman and of great importance to every legion post. They should interest the beneficiaries, dependents, relatives and friends of soldiers, sailors and marines. The next article will appear tomorrow.

By CHARLES O. POWER.

The American Legion, representing as it does, the opinion of the ex-service men and women, is vitally concerned regarding legislation in connection with all War Risk matters, and one of the members likes to know who is with their organization and who is "agin it." To wonder if Director Jones of the bureau has paid any particular attention to the resolutions passed at the national convention of the Legion.

He said he had, both as an official of the government and as a member of the Legion. I wondered if he could tell me the substance of the resolutions that related to his bureau.

And he said: The Legion's convention at Cleveland declared that Congress should act promptly upon the Sweet bill, which had been in the Senate at that time for two months; urged also the immediate passage of the Wason bill which had been introduced in the House some two weeks or so before, and further urged that all resolutions passed by the Legion should be acted upon by Congress at the earliest possible moment.

TELEGRAPHED SENATE BODY.

I asked if he had considered it any part of his duty to co-operate with the Legion. Of course he had, he said. In fact he did not wait until he returned to Washington, but, while in Minneapolis, sent the following telegram to Senators John Sharp Williams, Howard Sutherland and Reed Smoot, they being the three members of the sub-committee of the Finance Committee of the Senate having charge of war risk legislation.

The Sweet Bill was reported by two important committees of the American Legion in national convention assembled, with the urgent recommendation that it be promptly enacted, specifying particularly that option should be given insured for payment of insurance either in a lump sum or in instalments over three years or longer. Both Sweet Bill and Wason Bill were unanimously indorsed by the national convention of the American Legion. I sincerely hope that these highly important matters will be acted upon by the Senate before adjournment, if there is to be one."

VETERANS' MOTIVES IMPUGNED.

Surely, that looked like quick and friendly interest in the work of the legion for the disabled. And what did the distinguished Senators say in reply? This from Senator Williams:

"I am unalterably opposed to paying these insurances in lump sums to be wasted and thrown away by the beneficiaries, who would then be left in such a situation that they would have a splendid case for pensions from the United States government. I understand perfectly the motives of a great many people who want that done; who want it done so that their people can get the insurance first and afterwards get a pension on the ground of necessitous condition."

Senator Sutherland replied that he would give the Sweet bill his closest attention when it came before the Senate for action. Senator Smoot replied, acknowledging receipt of a letter from Director Jones with enclosures from two writers deploring the opposition to the Sweet bill in the Senate and ridiculing the payment plan of $57.70 per $1,000 of insurance per month for a period of twenty years.

Smoot stated he would call the sub-committee of the Finance Committee together to act finally on the bill to amend the War Risk Insurance Act "just as soon as there is any chance for its consideration in the Senate."

JONES SEEKS ACTION.

This was November 10, and in this connection it may be well to point out that no action was taken until the latter part of December.

Did Director Jones think he had done a complete job in lining up these three Senators? No, he did not. Immediately following his return to Washington from the national convention he had caused the War Risk Bureau to distribute to every member of Congress a copy of the legion's resolutions on war risk and other beneficial legislation.

More than that, as the days passed and nothing was done by the Senate, the Washington officials of the Legion became uneasy, said Director Jones, and repeatedly sought the cooperation of the officials of the War Risk Bureau in reminding members of the proper committee of the Senate of the urgency of the legislation. This co-operation, he says, was freely given.

A month passed and then it was decided by the Legion officials that it was high time to plant a vigorous kick where it would be felt.

AWAKENS STATESMEN.

Director Jones concurred and agreed to call a conference to be attended by the national commander of the Legion and all the State commanders to consider just what should be done. The conference lasted three days, December 15, 16 and 17. Keep your eye on these dates and those which follow. Word quickly reached the statesmen at the Capitol that the Legionaires were in no mood for further delay or quibbling about the legislation that had been asked for.

The conference wound up with a reception, dinner and speechmaking in the House restaurant. And that little affair opened the eyes of the legion leaders as to the relative potency of pretty resolutions and petitions and personal contact with our great men.

Big men of the Senate and House were there and intermingled with the commanders. The statesmen told the legion men how much they appreciated the work of the soldiers, sailors and marines. The legion speakers told the statesmen just what they wanted from them for the benefit of the service people they represented. And among other things they made it plain that they wanted the Sweet Bill, and wanted it right away, and were absolutely opposed to the surgical operation on the War Risk Bureau proposed by Senator Smoot.

SWEET BILL PASSED.

It is interesting to observe that, within three days, the Sweet bill, after its long delay in the Senate, was passed, Senator Smoot having asked for unanimous consent. But it is pertinent to refer to the status of the bill as it left the House and also as it finally passed the Senate.

The House receded on nine objections made by the Senate and the Senate receded on two points insisted upon by the House. One of these was a mere matter of punctuation. In other words, the bill left the Senate a deformed act rather than an improved one with not a single addition made to it in the Senate, notwithstanding many urgent recommendations made by the American Legion in resolutions which were brought thoroughly to the attention of the Senate.

This experience taught the legion the vastly greater value of direct understanding with their representatives and then was born the policy of having State and local posts bring home to the law makers the wishes of the legion.

WASON BILL AS TEST.

It is admitted that the Sweet bill is a big strike forward, but it is because of the diminished scope of original form by the Senate and the necessity for legislation putting the bread of life into sailors and soldiers, which will provide other essentials of justice for the former service men, that the legion is now demanding action on the Watson bill and proposes to make it the test of friendship.

The article tomorrow will analyze the Wason bill as improved by the legion and the director of war risk insurance.

SAILS FOR ENGLAND TO REPAIR CRIPPLED SHIPS

Captain Caleb R. Kelley, a port warden, will sail for England Wednesday to superintend repairs on the five-masted schooners Jane Palmer and Cora F. Cressy, formerly employed in the coastwise coal trade. The Palmer was bound from Garston for Newport News, losing anchors and sustaining damage to hull and fittings, being now at Liverpool, while the Cressy, from Rotterdam for New York, put into Penarth for repairs.

LAWRENCE DEPOT ROOF FALLS, CUTTING WIRES

Lawrence, Feb. 16.—The roof over the old Boston & Lowell depot, the main railroad station at Lawrence, owned by the Boston & Maine Railroad, crashed to the ground under the weight of a large amount of snow and ice. The accident cut off practically all telegraph connections, as the main line runs directly beneath the station roof.

ALLEGED MURDERER IS CAUGHT IN ANDOVER

Lawrence, Feb. 16.—Nicola Dispensa, aged fifty-seven, who is alleged to have shot and killed his brother-in-law, Joseph Pettoscotti at the latter's former home, Common street, Lawrence, was arrested in a lonely hut on Corbett road, Andover, after an all-day search. The shooting affair followed a quarrel over a picture in Pettoscotti's home.

LYNN PHONE OPERATOR WEDDED TO MANAGER

Miss Frances B. Landry, chief operator in the Lynn Telephone Exchange, and Manager John J. Barry, were married by the Rev. George A. Gordeau at St. Jean de Baptiste Church. They were attended by Miss Margaret Landry, a sister of the bride, and James K. Barry of Worcester, and a brother of the groom.

WHO'S WHO ON BOSTON'S NEW POLICE FORCE

JAMES E. McPHEE.

James E. McPhee, aged twenty-two years and single, was appointed to Boston's new police force December 3 and assigned to Station No. 9, Dudley street, Roxbury, under Captain Farley S. Shilinglo. During the day he may be seen at Uphams Corner. Prior to his enlistment on March 6, 1917, he was employed as a painter for James Barker at the Simpson drydocks, East Boston. He was a member of Company H of the Old Ninth Massachusetts until they were mustered into the 101st Regiment. McPhee was overseas from September 6, 1917, until he was discharged, February 12, 1919. Before being gassed and wounded with shrapnel he took part in the engagements at Brocoey Woods, on the Toul sector, Chamindes Dames, and it was during a raid at Fleury-Wood that he received his injuries that kept him in the hospitals of France for three months. Following his recovery he was sergeant of a guard over German prisoners. McPhee hails from East Boston, where he makes his home with his people at No. 230 Saratoga street.

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate none had neglected fatalness or had been merely taking care of the ages (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself, by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer is hereby invited to send for a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended, so the rupture CAN'T come back. Send today for PLAPAO Co., Block 511, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.

DUBLIN CASTLE IN DISCORD

French About to Retire as Lord Lieutenant, Is the Belief

By International News Service.

Dublin, Feb. 16.—With the round-up of active Sinn Fein leaders continuing spasmodically, this city buzzed today with reports of acute disagreements among the British officials at Dublin Castle. These strengthen the belief current in some circles that Lord French is about to retire as Lord Lieutenant.

The British officials at Dublin Castle live behind barbed wire entanglements and barricades, guarded by soldiers and constabulary. Lord French and his immediate advisers are said to be virtual prisoners like the heads of the government of the Irish republic. No sleep in a different house nearly every night to avoid the Britain secret service agents.

Permanent officials residing at Dublin Castle seldom venture outside and when it is necessary to consult the Lord Lieutenant and the telephones are judged unsafe, the trip to the vice regal lodge is made in an armored motor car.

James McMahon, a Roman Catholic home ruler, who was appointed under-secretary at Dublin Castle, has been superseded by his chief clerk, but he refuses to resign. Should he be forced out it is possible that he may make some sensational revelations as to conditions at Dublin Castle.

This will be a vital week in Irish affairs with the introduction of Premier Lloyd George's new home rule bill in the House of Commons.

16 Short Rides in Quincy for $1

Short ride on all Bay State lines in Quincy will be sixteen for $1, beginning tomorrow. The reduction in fares is the first official act of the "Home Rule" committee which is operating the Quincy division for the public trustees.

The short ride is one to or from City square. The ten-cent fare for a ride across the city still will obtain, together with transfer privilege. Chairman Forest I. Neal of the "Home Rule" committee today issued a statement asking the Quincy public to assist the new plan and make further reductions possible.

CHILDREN'S CONCERT BY SYMPHONY FEB. 26

The Second Young People's concert will be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on the afternoon of February 26, at 4 o'clock. All tickets have been distributed through the heads of the schools of Greater Boston. This will be the last of these concerts.

JAZZ AND SHIMMY BARRED IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, Feb. 16.—Commissioner of Public Safety Albert L. Bartlett, backed up by Chairman John F. Croston of the Board of Health, has put the ban on jazz and shimmy dancing in Haverhill. Dr. Croston says that the character of some of the dances "is decidedly detrimental to public health and public morals."

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE BY CUTTING HIS THROAT

Daniel O'Brien of Brockton, a guest of this city at the Wayfarers' Lodge, Hawkins street, attempted suicide early today by cutting his throat. He was found by Watchman Patrick Powers and removed to the Relief Hospital.

BOSTON FIGURES IN RED RAID

Seized Records Give Evidence of Activities in Several Large Cities

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 16.—Twenty-nine men, mostly Italians, arrested in a raid here, were taken to Ellis Island today to await deportation proceedings on the ground that they are criminal anarchists of the "L'Era Nuovs" group.

It was this same association that produced Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert of Italy, according to Department of Justice officials.

The raiders said they found I. W. W. records of activities in New York, Chicago, Boston, Rochester, Philadelphia and other Eastern cities, left behind when E. F. Dorre, Philadelphia secretary of the I. W. W., left hurriedly in advance of the raid.

From other records found it is expected that the organization's branches in half a dozen large cities will be located.

$45,000 in Dickey Estate

Charles W. Dimick of Somerville has been appointed administrator of the estate of Orrin R. Dickey of Lexington, who died December 13, 1919. The estate is valued at $45,000.

To Remove Discolored, Coarse or Chapped Skin

If your skin is chapped, rough or hereditab a liberal amount of mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning fine flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer film skin is soon absorbed, not so gradually, there's not the slightest safety inconvenience. Even the ugliest complexion yields to this treatment. The remarkably skin whitening and beautifying results are fresh and youthful looking. Get mercolized wax at the transformation. It is the only reliable way to remove the disfigurement of freckled, blotchy or weather-beaten complexion. Full directions of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.—Advertisement.

Lincoln Prize Essay and Girl Author

By DOROTHY CUSHING O'KEEFE

MISS DOROTHY O'KEEFE.

When Abraham Lincoln in 1861 took up the burden which Buchanan had so willingly resigned, the most important problem which confronted him was the question of his policy, not merely at home, but abroad.

Not only had he to create a sentiment which would arouse to active consciousness the passive national spirit of the people, but he had also to hold at bay the foreign powers which, it was not unreasonable to suppose, would recognize the South as a nation or propose intervention which could not be rejected without awakening enmity in the nations from which such a proposal had come or at least not without embarrassmentto the American government.

But the task was not a light one, nor was the situation easily conquered. For during the first part of the war there was grave danger of foreign interference. There lacked not those who would have been glad to see the great western republic lose some of its strength through disunion.

Of the principal foreign nations, Switzerland, Italy, Germany and Russia in Europe, Turkey and China in Asia, showed themselves friendly to the North. On the other hand, France and England from the very first were deeply in sympathy with the Confederacy. Of these two countries, the attitude of France was the less annoying because she less studied and comprehensive. Aside from her manoeuvring in Mexico, which called forth from Lincoln a reminder of the Monroe Doctrine, and aside from her attempts to mediate alone or in alliance with England, France caused no graver embarrassment than to define her position as unfriendly to the United States government.

It was England who was our most persistent and difficult enemy; it was to avoid a ruinous clash with England that Lincoln's diplomatic powers were tried to the utmost. For although the official conduct of the British government was irreproachable, unofficially it was most unfortunate and dishonorable. Undoubtedly the attitude taken by England toward the North was due in part to the bad inheritance of two wars, and in part to the belief that the Union was actually dissolved in fact if not in theory. Moreover, since the Confederate States were the great cotton field of the world, the blockade declared by Lincoln upon the Southern ports meant that thousands of cotton mills would be closed in England and that thousands of families would starve.

But the consideration which undoubtedly counted most in determining England's policy was the fact that disaster to the North would mean the discontinuance of a tariff highly inconvenient to English manufacturers. In short, there was friendship in England for the Confederacy because the latter was a good customer; there was hostility toward the legitimate American government because that government represented a dangerous commercial rival.

That the heroic but illusioned South was spending itself for an institution founded upon dollars and cents, while the overshrewd Yankees were struggling to save the ideals of freedom and national honor counted least of all in determining England's attitude toward the United States. It was a question not of right and wrong, but of expediency.

In pursuance of her policy then she lost no opportunity for aiding the South if it were possible to give such aid without openly antgonizing the North. To this end soon after the outbreak of hostilities she issued a proclamation of neutrality, thus establishing the international standard of the confederated States as a belligerent nation. In addition the English press, with the exception of the Daily News and Spectator, heaped upon Lincoln's administration the most adverse and contemptuous criticism, and made Lincoln himself the butt of insulting ridicule. Even the private letters of Americans in London's politest circles were of a highly unpleasant character.

Moreover, British ports were the shipyards of the Southern navy and of the privateers which so effectively swept the Yankee merchant marine off the seas. It would be reasonably safe to say that every well-equipped vessel which ever flew the Confederate flag was built in an English harbor. But the protests of the Federal government against these flagrant breaches of neutrality met nothing but procrastinating replies.

Only Lincoln's unfailing tact and firmness prevented foreign powers from giving to the South as a nation the recognition which they had already accorded her as a belligerent. It was due only to the masterful and unyielding policy of Lincoln's administration that the United States, weakened and harassed by the cruel destruction of a great civil war, was left free to concentrate in the prosecution of that war the full power of her energies unhampered by foreign interference.

Throughout his entire term as President it was Lincoln's high purpose to preserve the supremacy of the United States, to maintain the strength and dignity of the Constitution, under which she had grown great, and to protect her to the utmost of his ability against foreign encroachment. Today we can do no better than follow his policy. It has been proved reliable. It has safeguarded and defended the integrity of the American nation since its infancy. It has not isolated her from the world's great questions, but it has made her the mistress of her own fate, and she has thriven under that guidance.

To give into the hands of foreign powers the control of the high destiny and vast resources of the United States may, as it has been claimed, make her a greater moral asset to the world. May it not also make her a liability and cripple her tremendous capacity for service?

The Civil War, more than anything else, betrayed the uncertainty of international relations in a great national crisis. Self-preservation is the first law of nature no less with nations than with men. The enemy of yesterday may be the friend of today, the foe of tomorrow. America must not sell her birthright for a mess of pottage!

JUDGES AGREE ON BEST ESSAY

Unanimous in Decision That Miss O'Keefe Earned Award

Boston American:

In examining the Lincoln essays submitted in your recent contest, the judges found that the essays in general were divided into three groups:

1—Biographies of Lincoln.

2—Recitals of the relations existing between the United States and foreign countries during the Civil War.

3—Recitals of the relations existing between the United States and foreign countries during the Civil War, and an exposition of the lessons to be drawn from them, that are applicable to the present-day relations between the United States and these same countries.

The essays in Group 1 were immediately rejected since they were not in keeping with the terms in the contest. Many excellent essays were written by Group 2 but were judged worthy or prizes since they did not meet the second requirement in the contest, "The lessons of War (Lincoln's) words and his attitude on these situations applying to our time."

The unanimous decision of the judges is that the $500 prize should be awarded to Miss Dorothy O'Keefe, senior class, Lynn Classical High School, and that Roland W. Tyler, junior class, Beverly High School, should receive credit for presenting the essay next in merit.

In awarding the medals about one-third were alloted to elementary school pupils in keeping with the statement, "The age and class rank will be taken into consideration by the judges in deciding the winner." Moreover, the third of the medals the various grades of the elementary school pupils were apportioned among the various grades of the elementary school. The same system was followed in handling the high school essays, and the various classes received their allotment.

Sincerely yours,
MATTHEW P. LACEY,
ELIZABETH M. RICHARDSON,
WILFRED F. KELLEY.

PLAN TO KEEP SICK SOLDIERS NEAR HOMES

Ex-service men afflicted with tuberculosis will be treated in sanatoriums near their homes, if efforts of American Legion posts and Surgeon-General Rupert Blue of the Public Health Service are successful. The legion posts are endeavoring to find sanatoriums where patients can be accommodated for $3 a day. Thousands of former soldiers and sailors are said to be suffering with the disease.

Our Women Queens Says Elinor Glyn

London, Feb. 16.—Elinor Glyn's opinion of American women is given in Ladies' Field. She says the American's power is due to a self-assertiveness born of the treatment she receives. She is treated as a queen by her menfolks, and, if she has money, she can become a queen of society.

"In other words," says the author, "the American woman's power is due to her good conceit of herself."

"No other nation can compare in absolute all-round attraction with an English gentleman, but if I wanted perfect gentlemanly consideration, and the essence of disturbing thrills, I should choose an American man."

MARRIED JAN. 31, FUNERAL TODAY

Providence, R. I., Feb. 16.—Funeral services were held today at St. Charles' Catholic Church for Edmund Weigel, former Camp Devens soldier, who married his nurse, Miss Amanda Nadeau, after physicians had abandoned hope of his recovery. Rev. Raymond Plasmans, who performed the wedding ceremony for the couple on January 31, officiated at the requiem mass today.

JUDGE BISHOP TAKES OATH AND BEGINS DUTIES

Judge Elias B. Bishop of Newton, who was appointed by Governor Coolidge to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Judge William F. Judge Bishop has been assigned to the trial of jury cases in the Eighth Session of the Superior Court.

GIRL GRATEFUL TO AMERICAN

Miss Dorothy C. O'Keefe, Awarded First Prize for Lincoln Essay, Lives in Lynn

Miss Dorothy C. O'Keefe, whose essay on Abraham Lincoln has been awarded first prize by the judges of the contest, lives at No. 45 Benson Hill avenue, Lynn, and is the daughter of Mrs. Katherine E. O'Keefe, a widow. She is a senior in the Lynn Classical High School, extremely popular in her class, and prominent in the various activities of the high school.

She is an assistant editor of the Gazette, the quarterly publication of the school, and is vice-president of the "Literary Club," an honorary society devoted to a special study of literature. She has had many of her own articles printed in the school magazine, but has never written for an outside publication.

Miss O'Keefe is a graduate of St. Mary's Parochial School in Lynn, and from her freshman year on maintained an especially high average in scholarship. Her standing in every school is over 90 per cent, with special distinction in English. She is preparing for Boston University and will study for the teaching profession.

Miss O'Keefe expressed her gratitude to the American.

"I am very happy and grateful," she said. "I never expected such an honor, but I am more than pleased. It will be a great help to me in finishing my college course. I wish to thank the American most heartily."

CECIL'S OUT TO UPLIFT OPERA

Miss Cunningham Believes in Changing Shade of Hair and Husbands

By FRED J. McISAAC.

When I was a small boy about twenty-five years ago, more or less, I had a mop of red hair, and as I walked along the streets the other kids would shout:

"Red head, white horse. Oh, see the white horse."

Inevitably a white horse would loom in view attached to a coal wagon or a peddle's cart. It was very annoying.

That was many years ago, as the cat says. I had forgotten all about the conjunction of red heads and white horses. Nobody reminded me of the relationship any more, probably because the ruins of my flaming top is now a nondescript brown, and I hadn't thought about it for years—I decade or two.

LO, THE WHITE AUTO!

And yesterday I walked up Tremont street behind a girl, a girl with a mop of red hair—hair of such a flamboyant, inflammable red that without any volition I looked around for a white horse.

There wasn't one in sight. Time had eliminated white horses. It had long little about red heads, but white horses non sunt, or any other kind at that moment on Tremont street.

But suddenly from a cross street, with a roaring motor, a huge white automobile darted in front of the red-headed girl, splashing brown "gue" all over the front of her dress.

"Darn you," remarked the lady to the impulsive driver, "if you won't going so fast I'd bite a hole in your tire."

And then I recognized Miss Cecil Cunningham, the belle of St. Louis, the erstwhile Pink Lady, the vaudeville top liner, the dashing divorcee, and the comedienne of "The Rose of China."

"Hello," said Cecil, wiping off her skirt, "the trenches were never like this."

NARY A CUSS WORD.

"I was going up to the Shubert to interview you very soon. How about the present?"

"Fine. Do you print profanity?"

"No indeed. I work for a home paper."

"Then can the interview, the way I feel about my dress I couldn't give you anything else."

"I thought I might get some views out of you regarding matrimony." (Note: Miss Cunningham was recently divorced from a prominent composer.) "I feel worse about that than I do about my dress."

"Then you'll never marry again?"

"I wouldn't say that. Bring on a good one. I think I'll marry an Irishman next time. I love excitement. At least I could get a fight out of him, and the last one couldn't even do that. He was too fat to fight."

Miss Cunningham grinned wickedly. "Stop thinking about such things. I am going back into grand opera after this season. I was only in it about ten minutes before but this time I shall stay longer. The way I look at it is this, Mary Garden is getting old and Geraldine Farrar prefers the movies anyway. There ought to be an opening for a beautiful golden haired soprano about my inches."

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

Then comes a pale face, sallow look, blue eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of order. Instead of using calomel, which is a dangerous drug, you take one or two Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 10c and 25c.

POINTS OUT DANGER IN TRADING WITH RUSSIA

New York, Feb. 16.—The danger of exporting goods to Russia under present conditions was brought to the attention of American merchants in a statement just issued by the American Manufacturers' Export Association. Direct trade with Russia, the association declared, is now impossible, save under control and supervision of the Soviet government, owing to the complete demoralization of the transport system of the country. For some time to come, it was pointed out, trade with Russia can be conducted only upon a barter basis.

ALEX SMITH SHOWING FINE FORM IN MATCH GOLF PLAY IN FLORIDA

WITH ROBERTSON, WINS FROM HUTCHINSON AND BRADY

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

According to advices from Belleair, Florida, Alex Smith can still brag about a golf course in his championship boots. Alex the pro fessionsm' at Belleair and with the aid of his assistant, Dave Robertson, he entertained the guests Sunday by beating Mike Brady and Jock Hutchinson 3 and 2 in an eighteen-hole exhibition match.

Guests at the hotel were very much pleased with this turn of affairs, as they recovered some of the gold they parted with one week before when Dave Robertson found Jock Hutchinson too much for him. The hotel crowd is loyal and always backs the local talent, no matter how formidable the invaders appear. Brady and Hutchinson were made favorites by outsiders from Tampa and a few "wise" guests, who did not dare play along with the house professionals.

Alex started Mike and Jock by introducing birdie threes into the party at the long seventh and ninth holes. In each exertion he set his second shot down beside the flag. It was lucky Alex was on, for Davy was off, and until he reached the sixteenth green Davy gutted the ball everywhere except into the holes. At the sixteenth green, after Jock and Mike had played four and were beside the pin for par fives, Robertson rolled a twenty-five-footer out of sight for a birdie four and the match.

Mike Brady, who is now playing from the Oakland Hills Club, held enough fives to have won many poker pots. He had ten altogether, three in the first hand and no less than seven on the last nine holes. It has been many days since Mike took seven fives in nine holes. His card added to 84. Alex had a 78, Jock a 79 and Robertson an 80. A stiff breeze from the Gulf of Mexico made low scoring difficult.

Contest Championship of Cuba This Week

The amateur championship of Cuba will be contested this week at the Havana Country Club, with a number of Americans entered. The nineteenth hole is the most difficult on the Havana course. Par is six highballs.

Winchester Course Open for Tournaments

The Winchester Country Club has offered the use of its course for any event the Massachusetts Golf Association elects to schedule there this year. The invitation was extended formally upon the election to the presidency of the M. G. A. of B. K. Stephenson, who is a Winchester member.

President Stephenson says that one of his chief desires during his term of office is to bring the Lesley Cup back to the Bay State. He also points out that, if Rhode Island and Connecticut so help us by sns a Lesley Cup contender, the golfers of these States should get into communication with Robert Lesley, the donor of the cup, who has the say concerning the manner in which this competition shall be played and what teams may enter it.

Metacomet Golfers Have Ambitions

The Metacomet Golf Club of Providence plans a large opening in the Spring, when the new clubhouse will be turned over to the members. In the Fall Metacomet will put on its second amateur-professional best ball tournament, and the members have already started preparations to also enough prize money so that all the best professionals will want to try for some of the purse. Metacomet hopes to have a national championship some day.

Winter League Golf About Over

The Winter league season for golfers is about over. Beginning March 1 with the Spring tournament at Pinehurst there will be plenty of real competition in the South to interest the players, even if only a small percentage will be able to take part in these events. A number of interesting events are already scheduled for the South and the list is being added to daily. The tournaments should find plenty of worthwhile purses to split up.

May Shift Date of U. S. Open Golf

It is likely that the date for the United States open championship to be played at Inverness in Toledo will be shifted from June until September. The British open is to be played in June and the American date will be set back enough to allow the Americans plenty of time to return from Deal and the Britishers who come over time enough to try out our turf.

UNIFORM RULES GOLFERS' AIM

Standardization of the Ball Is Sure to Come—Stymie to Be Legislated Out

By WALTER C. HAGEN,
Open Golf Champion.

The golf rules are coming up again for consideration this year in Scotland. They will not attempt to do it as the other side and have asked the U. S. G. A. to send over several representatives to help out, and if possible make uniform rules the world over.

One of the laws that may possibly be changed is that requiring a ball covered with mud to be played. It is quite evident that there is some unfairness in the rule which often serves as a big handicap, especially on the putting green. Many golfers think that this rule should be changed and thereby permit a player to clean his ball on the green. In the early days, so I am told, there was some sort of a rule that permitted this.

Another regulation that seems unfair is the one which forces a player to play a ball half buried in the ground. On wet days this is often done away with in matches by mutual consent. This rule was thrust into the book in the last fifty years, and prior to that time a ball that buried itself in the ground could be lifted and put on fair ground.

There is another thing that many players are kicking about. This is the ruling on lost balls. It seems to be the concensus of opinion that one stroke penalty is enough for a lost ball in a medal round, and that a lost ball should be a lost hole in match play just the same. The same principle should govern the ball out of bounds, many believe.

Then there is the question about the standardization of the ball. Some golfers in Europe feel that the manufacturers have gone too far in the making of balls with unlimited driving powers. Some have suggested that the best is the one we use now in a friendly and suggest that if this was adopted the drive would cease to cut any figure in the scoring. In other words, it would make extremely long hitting impossible, and a light hitter would be able to put the ball just as far down the fairway as the longest hitter of the present heavy ball.

Another important proposed step is a ban on the stymie. For some reason or other this seems to be doomed, but I for one will regret to see it go from the game. We pros never have to encounter the stymie in our championships, and know little of it as far as blocking the path of ambitious golfers who claim that they have been hindered from winning matches on account of hard luck stymies. I cannot remember a single championship where the stymie beat any really great golfer.

TITLE AT STAKE IN MAT BOUT

Ketonen and Kilonis Match Has the Wrestling Fans on Edge

The Ketonen-Kilonis match, which carries with it the world's middleweight wrestling championship, has stirred up almost as great an interest as was shown in the Stecher-Zbyszko contest last week, and Promoter Tuohey is looking for another record attendance when this wonderful pair of speedsters clash for the title in Mechanics Building on Thursday night.

The fact that the men meet under exactly the same conditions as they battled in their sensational match in January means that the fans will get plenty of action from the first drop of the hat, as Kilonis intends to force the issue from the start.

Mike Yokel, who recently defeated Ketonen at Worcester in a match at catchweights which did not involve the title, will be on hand to personally challenge the winner, and agrees to make the championship limit if given the chance to regain the title he held for so many years.

HARVARD-YALE ON ICE IN PHILLY SATURDAY

Harvard will meet Yale at Philadelphia Saturday evening in hockey. The crimson team will leave Cambridge Friday forenoon and will spend the evening in New York. Coach Claflin is hopeful of getting his crew on the Philadelphia rink for a long practice a few hours before the game.

HARVARD '23 GRID MEN SEEK CLASS PRESIDENCY

Charles C. Buell of Hartford, Ct., and Vinton Chapin of Boston have been nominated for the presidency of the freshman class at Harvard. Both were members of the 1923 football eleven, which Buell captained. Nominations are also made for vice-president and secretary-treasurer. Election day is February 25.

Carpentier Accepts Offer of Fox

New York, Feb. 16.—Georges Carpentier, through his manager, Francois Descamps, has accepted the $250,000 offer of William Fox for a fight with Jack Dempsey for the championship of the world. Dempsey's end is to be $200,000 under the terms of the Fox offer, but no sign of acceptance has come from the Dempsey camp so far.

LORTZ TO MEET CALLAHAN

Boxers in Twelve-Round Bout at Suffolk A. A. Tonight; Downey Battles Farren

By JACK CONWAY.

Frankie Callahan, one of the most formidable challengers of Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard, will clash with Harry Lortz of Kansas City in a twelve-round bout at the Suffolk A. A.'s show at Hibernian Hall, Roxbury, tonight. It will be Callahan's first Boston appearance since his stirring battle with Lew Tendler at the Arena. In that encounter, Callahan shattered his right hand shortly after having scored a knockdown.

The former Brooklyn favorite is now making his home in Boston. The hand he injured while fighting Tendler is in perfect condition once more an he recently proved at Lowell when he stopped Eddie Morgan of England in a round.

Just now Callahan is out to prove he is the logical opponent for Leonard. The latter has refused to meet Benny Murphy's protege since winning the title. Callahan charges this is due to the two managers who handed the champion before the latter grabbed the title from Welsh.

Lortz, like Callahan, plans to campaign out of Boston in future. He realizes there is a snug fortune in sight for a lightweight star in this section of the country. Consequently he will make a mighty effort to upset Callahan.

Battling Downey of Roxbury will have Joe Farren, East Boston welterweight, as an opponent in the semi-final of ten rounds. Young Reuben and Danny Glynn, both of Roxbury, will battle six rounds, while there will also be another six-round encounter.

Double Win for Tilden

Providence, R. I., Feb. 16.—William T. Tilden, 2d, defeated R. Lindley Murray, 6—1, 6—4, 8—7, and Charles S. Garland, 6—4, 7—5.

4-Cornered School Meet on Today

A quadrangular track meet between Dorchester, Brookline, English and Latin School takes place this afternoon at the East Armory. This meet was originally scheduled for the 6th of the month with Newton High School included, but was postponed because of the weather. Although Dorchester High and Brookline are represented by strong teams the choice for first honors lies between English High and Latin. One of the best races of the meet will lie between Captain Pete Walsh of Dorchester and Archibald of Brookline High in the 1,000-yard run.

LOUIS LEONARD TO BOX KID BROWN AT TRIPLE-A

Harry (Kid) Brown of Philadelphia will have Louis Leonard of the North End as an opponent in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Triple-A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night.

Harry Chung of Salem will meet Young Gould of Brockton in the semi-final of eight rounds. Red McNeil of South Boston and Young Stone of Dorchester, heavyweights, will battle six rounds, as will Flash Rogers of the North End and Young Benny of Newport.

CAPABLANCA TO MEET CHESS CHAMPION LASKER

Dr. E. Lasker, the world's chess champion, is to meet Jose R. Capablanca, the noted Cuban expert, for the title. The match was arranged by the Nederlandsche Shaakbond and the agreement was signed at The Hague in January. The match is to be one of eight games up, draws not to count. If, after thirty games, neither player has won eight, the title shall go to the one having the highest score, and in case of a tie, Dr. Lasker will retain the title.

Amateur Bouts

Amateur boxers will get busy at the Strand Theatre, Jamaica Plain, where the St. Thomas Catholic Association will stage a tournament. The open events will be in the 115, 125 and 135-pound classes.

HARVARD OPENS BASEBALL YEAR

Coach Slattery to Meet Players at Union Tonight—Battery Men Out Tomorrow

Coach Jack Slattery will have a chance to look over his baseball candidates at Harvard when candidates for the team meet tonight in the trophy room of the Union. The coach is one of the four orators who will speak to the squad, his associate spellbinders being Captain Bobby Emmons, Dr. Edward Nichols and Manager Alexander Kirk.

Slattery gets his batteries out tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the varsity baseball cage. His pitchers include Babe Felton, the quarterback; Carl Harrison, who has already vanquished one Yale team; Freddy Bullard, Everett Hardell and Stan Johnson of last year's nine; Billy Rice, the pony left-hander; Eddie Goode and Harlan Russell.

The catchers will be out to limber up include Jerrie Murphy of Malden, fast backstop on last year's freshman team; Tom Gammack, the lanky veteran of last year's team; Bob Lancaster and John Scott. Austin Blair, who is reported as desirous of trying out for first base, may change his mind and report tomorrow. Blair is a fine catcher, but played in and out of ball last Spring.

Pittsburgh Ice Team May Be Barred

Pittsburgh, Feb. 16.—The hockey team of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association may be barred from participation in the Olympic hockey contests, it is learned, as a result of the discovery that all the members of the team are citizens of Canada, and therefore not truly representative of the city.

CALZONE AND TILLO TO SETTLE DIFFICULTIES

Al Calzone, Milford kayo star, and Frank Tillo of the North End will settle their ring differences when they meet in a twenty-round bout at Framingham tonight. The weight for the match is 140 pounds. The rival boxers have each posted $200 with the American for weight and appearance.

Calzone has been one of the sensations of the boxing game hereabouts. He has only lost one bout since starting boxing. Tillo also has had a remarkable run of victories and believes he carries too many guns for his rival.

WILSON GUNNING FOR O'DOWD

Charlestown Boxer Wants to Know Why Champion Is Unwilling to Give Him Bout

Johnny Wilson of Charlestown has issued a challenge to Mike O'Dowd, the middleweight champion. Wilson, in his challenge, says that he has beat every middleweight in the East and wants to know why he is being sidestepped by the champion. The Charlestown boxer says he will meet O'Dowd at the weight and in the event of O'Dowd's not being able to make the weight he can come in weighing a ton.

INDOOR TENNIS TITLE MATCH AT LONGWOOD

An indoor tennis tournament to determine the local doubles championship will be conducted next Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Longwood indoor courts.

PATRIOTIC girls are all set for the next war. They will take no chances of a slacker hiding behind a woman's skirts. Ain't going to be no skirts.

LOOKS like this Spring's fashions will consist mostly of weather conditions.

SHADOW SKIRTS are out. If your skirt throws a shadow, you're overdressed.

WHILE the men are wearing black for Demon Rum, the gals will break out in frocks of gorgeous materials whenever they wear materials. So little goods are being used in dresses that the tailors have hocked their shears and are cutting out gowns with electric fans.

LATEST scandal from Paris chirps that the ladies will wear skirts to the knee. They don't say which knee.

WHAT'S become of the old-fashioned flapper who used to scamper into the dry goods department and order a yard of cloth? She'd be a wholesaler now. The firm would think she was trying to buy up their entire stock for a competitor. No more delivery departments in the dress works now. There's nothing to deliver.

HOOP SKIRTS are coming back. Just kick the staves out of an ash barrel and you have five hoop skirts.

FRONT kick in with seven bits to pipe Aphrodite when you can buy an orchestra seat on Tremont street and confirm the rumor. The sparse fashion is now a direct result of the war. Limited to so many sox for the soldiers that they now think that is the only article of clothing there is.

If you see a gal wearing her dress on the third finger of her left hand, you will know that she is engaged. If she hasn't got anything on that finger, you will know she is married. Don't think that we are complaining about the fashions. The styles are making the world brighter. The sun is shining on backs that it never shone on before.

LOOKS like the moths will join the migratory birds who live in the U. S. and flutter to South America for food.

OF course, the styles will never really become outrageous. The conservative element will wear skirts to the knees. The radicals will still continue to run up large millinery bills.

YOU can't just figure what kind of skirts the gals will wear next, if any. But the big dry goods and dress firms, who have built up businesses running into the millions, whose houses are hundreds of years old, whose establishments have been handed down from father to son and from son to chorus girls, will see that fashions do not fall from the high plane set by our Pilgrim Fathers when they first sailed into the three-mile limit and closed the bar on the Mayflower. Any manufacturer whose name is honored by the mercantile industry of the world, whose firm's trademark is a byword among business men, who sees personally that every piece of goods that leaves his works has his name on the selvage, will never consent to women's dresses and suits dwindling to the meagre proportions where it finally reaches the stage where he won't be able to discover enough goods to sew a label on it.

Peacedale and Standish Worsteds

Peacedale Worsteds, 14 full ounces in weight, absolutely all wool, Dublin twisted worsted goods, bought with a great quantity, a number of pieces of which have been labelled "slight seconds," but they are, as far as my customer is concerned, absolutely perfect and I sell them as perfect merchandise, because I take all loss that may incur.

No other tailor in the country today, not excepting the high-priced, ready-made clothiers who talk about all wool and give you shoddy, will advertise a Dublin twisted, all wool worsted suiting, 14 ounces in weight, under $60 for a suit, and I contend those fabrics compare very favorably for quality of merchandise with the suit sold for $100.

I offer you three styles, a beautiful shade of dark brown, a beautiful shade of dark green and a wonderful shade of dark blue, Peacedale Worsted Suitings, 14 ounces in weight, on which are the original tickets, at a price of $22.50

Standish Worsteds, 36 years in the woolen business, in which the words "Standish Worsteds" meant the finest manufactured, allow me to get extravagant in my praise of the three styles of absolutely all worsted, 14 ounces in weight fabrics, that I am offering today. The present market rules Standish Dublin Twisted, all worsted goods synonymous with the price of $60 for a suit of clothes.

I also have a wonderful range of Blue Serge, Fancy Worsteds and fine Cheviot Suitings, some absolutely all wool, some contain a percentage of cotton. My price for three-piece suit to order,

$22.50

Samples and Self Measurement Blanks Sent by Mail

I offer you three styles of Standish Worsteds, that no other tailor in the country advertises to sell under at least three times the price. These goods bear the original tickets.

This Day in History—February 16, 1920.

THIS is the anniversary of the birth, in 1517, of Gaspard de Coligny, the famous Huguenot leader whose efforts to secure freedom of worship aroused the hatred of the Duc de Guise and Charles IX., and led partly to the great St. Bartholomew massacre, in which De Guise had Coligny killed, and stamped on his corpse.

From the Earth to the Moon.

ACCORDING to the Journal of the Royal Artillery, a shell with a muzzle velocity of five-miles a second, if fired at the correct angle, would become an attendant satellite of the earth, and would go around it in a little less than one and a half hours. At seven miles a second, the shell would go off into space, altogether.

April Folly

By Cynthia Stockley

A Brilliant New Film Romance With Marion Davies

Watch for This Story in Motion Pictures

"April Folly," soon to be seen in leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production, released through Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft picture, under direction of Robert Z. Leonard. Scenario by Adrian Johnson.

IN her room she lay exhausted and very still for a long time, with the feeling that she had escaped a redhot gridiron. She looked in her mirror expecting to see a vision of Medusa, hair hanging in streaks, eyes distraught, and deep ruts in her cheeks; but her face was charming and composed, and a fixed smile curled her mouth. She shuddered at her own image.

"Lies deform and obscure the soul," she thought; "yet my face bears no mark of the lies I have told this afternoon or of the hell my spirit has passed through."

A Bit of White Hair

Only when she removed her hat, something strange arrested her attention—something that might have been a feather or a flake of snow lying on her luminous black hair, just where it grew low in a widow's peak at the centre of her forehead. She made to brush it lightly away, but it stayed—for it was not a feather at all but a lock of her own hair that had turned white. A little gift from Ronald Kenna!

He had played with her as a cat plays with a mouse before killing it. True, he had not killed her or (which would have been the same thing) exposed her mercilessly before Verekr Sarle's eyes. But he had made her pay for his clemency. Probably the cleverness with which she slipped out of the corners into which she was hedged, her skill in darting from under his menacing paw roused his admiration as well as his sporting instinct. It must have been a great game for him, but hers were the breathless emotions of the helpless mouse whose heart goes pit-a-pat in the fear of being gobbled up the next moment.

It was all very subtle. Sarle never suspected what was going on, so cool and sweet she looked under her shady hat, so unfailing was her composure. He was accustomed to the dry biting flavor of Kenna's speech, and paid no great heed to it, naturally supposing April to be the same, since they knew each other so well.

He believed himself listening to the witty reminiscences of two people with many friends and interests in common, and nothing in the girl's manner, as she lied and fenced and swiftly covered up mistakes with jest and laughter, betrayed the agony of baiting she was enduring.

Kenna was a friend he would have trusted with everything he had in the world, but he was aware of a twist in that friend's nature which made him look at women with scientific eyes. That always has been so. Some woman had given that cruel twist to a loyal and trusting nature; some loved hand had dealt the wound that festered in Ronald Kenna's heart, and Sarle, because he guessed this, forgave his friend much. But he would never have forgiven had he known what was passing there under his very eyes. The woman he loved was on the rack, and he never guessed it, because she smiled instead of crying out.

Dressed Carefully

And it was all to suffer again that evening—April knew that as she dressed herself carefully for dinner. There was no mistaking Kenna's pressing request that they should be allowed to come to her table. Sarle had not had time to ask for himself alone. Kenna had forestalled him, and there was double craft in the action; he meant to keep his eye, or, rather, his claw, on her, while preventing her from being alone with Sarle.

If she was in the fray to protect Sarle from the pain of finding her out, he was in to protect Sarle from her. The situation might have been funny if it had not been grim. She could have laughed at it but for her fear of Kenna, but that the whole miserable structure of her deceit rested on a girl's drowned body.

She put on a black gown. It seemed only fitting to absent herself awhile from the felicity of color. Besides, all her joy in her clothes had gone. How gladly she would have donned her own shabby garments, if with them would have returned the old peace of mind! But even the plain little demitoilette of black chiffon was peerlessly cut, and her whiteness glowed like a pearl through its filmy darkness.

There was no way of dressing her hair that would hide the white feather on her forehead and, after trying once or twice, she left it. It looked very remarkable, that touch of age above her young, flowerlike face. She could not altogether hate it, for it was a scar won bravely enough and in desperate battle, Africa had not taken long to put its mark on her!

The men were waiting for her in the lounge, Sarle looking radiantly happy because he was sure of the society of the two people he cared for most in the world, Kenna with a fresh device to try her composure.

Cynosure of All Eyes.

"I want to see if you can remember the ingredients of that cocktail I introduced to you at the Carlton on a certain memorable evening when we escaped from actual Grief," he said gayly. She looked at him reflectively. "As I've just been telling Sarle, you learned the recipe by heart, and swore that thenceforth you would use no other."

"Ah, yes," she drawled slowly; "but you take no account of time and my bitter quantum of repentance." I am a very different girl from the one you knew two years ago."

"I realize that, of course," he grinned with delight at her point. It seemed possible that the evening might be more entertaining than the afternoon.

"This girl never drinks cocktails," she finished quaintly, and he liked her more and more.

Many glances followed them as they passed down the long room full of rose-shaded candles and the heavy scent of flowers. Pretty women are not scarce in Cape Town, especially at the season when all Johannesburg crowds to the sea, but there was a haunting, almost tragic loveliness about April that night that set her apart from the other women and drew every eye. Sarle felt his pulses thrill with the pride that stirs every man when the seal of public admiration is set upon the woman he loves.

As he looked at her across the table, he suddenly remembered a little verse he had found scrawled in Kenna's writing on an old book once, when they were away together on the veld.

My love she is a lady fair,
A lady fair and fine.
She is a rat the finest meat
And drink the reddest wine.

Her jewelled foot shall tread the ground
Like a feather on the air.
Oh! And brighter than the sunset,
The frocks my love shall wear.

If she be loyal, men shall know
What beauty gilds my pride.
If she be false, the more glad I,
For the world is always wide.

Poor Kenna! She had been false; that was why he had sought the wide world of the veld and renounced women.

Pitied Friend

Sarle, certain of the innate truth and loyalty of the girl opposite him as her pearl-like outer beauty, could pity his friend's fate from the bottom of his soul. But, being a man, he did not linger too long with pity. None is so wise as a pleasant companion, and hope was burning in him like a blue flame—the hope that within a few hours two he would hold this radiant girl in his arms and touch her lips.

He thought of the garden outside, full of shadows and scented starlight, and, looking at the curve of her lips, his eyes darkened and strange bells rang in his ears. He had eluded him for many nights, although she knew he loved her. He had kissed her fingers and the palm of her hand, but tonight, out in the starlit garden, he meant to kiss her lips. The resolve was iron in him. He hardly heard what the other two were saying. He was living in a world of his own.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

And says Love, ole Dan, lookin' at this pic when he opens his evening paper—"she won't be alone very long, looking with her bright eyes at these two little bright-feathered lovers—without any of her own—not this girl!"

The Two Voices

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"SHE is not getting up for breakfast," Mrs. Courtney said with an air of determination that her daughter knew only too well.

She remembered it from childhood. It always warned the observer that Mrs. Courtney had come to some conclusion from which she was not to be swerved.

"Isn't she well?" Ruth questioned, her heart sinking as she foresaw complications that would involve Hugh's welfare.

"She is tired and nervous. I had her sleep in my room last night, and urged her to lie still this morning. I will have to get you to tell Mr. Rodney this. She cannot go there this morning."

"When will she go?" Ruth's question was asked with a gentleness that gave no suggestion of the fires of indignation smouldering beneath the surface.

Mrs. Courtney was good at avoiding an issue. She would temporize. "That is for Doris to decide," she replied. "Certainly she cannot go today."

"Then I must ask her when she will go," Ruth said, as, having finished her breakfast, she folded her napkin and pushed her chair back from the table.

"You can ask her this evening," the parent remarked.

"Since I am to telephone for her this morning, I must find out now," Ruth rejoined. "Unless"—turning on her way to the door—"you will explain to Mr. Rodney?"

"I certainly will not!" Mrs. Courtney snapped. "You are the one to do it."

"Then," was the quiet comment, "I am the one to get Doris' decision. I will go to her at once for it."

CHAPTER XXVII.

DORIS COURTNEY started nervously as her sister entered the room in which she lay, waiting for her breakfast. She had hoped to be spared an interview with Ruth.

"Good morning!" she said languidly. "I was just falling asleep again."

"I am sorry to disturb you, my dear," Ruth rejoined. "But mother wishes me to telephone to Mr. Rodney in your stead—as you are not getting up yet. I came in to see what you wished me to say to him."

"Oh, I don't know," Doris evaded. "You'd best explain to him that I have a horrid headache this morning, and, of course, cannot go over to his house."

"Will you go this afternoon?"

"No, I do not feel equal to it."

"Then can you give me some idea as to when you will go, Doris? Surely you must understand why I am so insistent. It is because of Hugh's condition—because he needs you."

Doris seemed to ponder for a minute. Encouraged by this, Ruth made a suggestion.

"I tell you what I will do. If you will go to the Rodneys this afternoon I will get a taxi and go with you. You will not have to exert yourself much, you see—and will only have to stay with Hugh for a little while."

"I do not intend to see Hugh today," Doris reiterated.

"When will you see him?"

"I don't know. I will send word beforehand when he may expect me."

Ruth came close to the side of the bed on which her sister was lying. She had a helpless sensation, as if it were impossible to impress the gravity of the matter under discussion.

"Doris," she urged, "if Hugh were himself, you might take that tone about him. As it is, you must see him regularly and begin as soon as possible. There is no way out of it."

The Cinema Murder

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

"LISTEN, Philip," she said. "I started life with the usual quiverful of good qualities, but there's one I've lost, and I don't want it back again. I'm a selfish woman. I am going to live for myself. I've paid a fair price, and I'm going to have what I've paid for. See?"

"Do you think," he asked, "that it is possible to make that sort of bargain with one's self and fate?"

She laughed scornfully.

"There's room for a little stiffening in you, even now, Philip! No one but a weakling ever talks about fate. You'd think better of you, I suppose, if I stayed in my room and wept. Well, I could do it if I let myself, but I won't. I should lose several hours of the life that belongs to me. You think I didn't care about Douglas? I am not at all sure that I didn't care for him as much as I ever did for you, although, of course, he wasn't worthy of it.

"But he's gone, and all the shudders and morbid regrets in the world won't bring him back again. And I am here in New York, and tomorrow I shall have twenty thousand pounds, and tonight I am with you, watching your play. That's life enough for me at present—no more, no less. I hate missing the first act, and I'm coming to see it again tomorrow. What time is it over?"

"Soon after eleven," he told her.

She glanced at her watch.

"You shall take me out and give me some supper," she decided, "somewhere where there's music."

He made no remark, but she surprised again something in his face which irritated her.

"Look here, Philip," she said firmly, "I won't have you look at me as though I were something unhuman. There are plenty of other women like me in the world, even if they are not quite so frank about it. I want to live, and I will live, and I grudge every moment out of which I am not extracting the fullest amount of happiness. That's because I've paid. It's the woman's bargaining instinct, you know. She wants to get value. * * * Now I want to hear about Miss Dalstan. Where did you meet her, and how did you get her to accept your play?"

"She was on the Elitania," he explained. "We crossed from Liverpool together. She sat at my table."

"How much does she know about you?" Beatrice asked bluntly.

"Everything," he confessed. "I don't know what I should have done without her. She has been the most wonderful friend any one could have."

Beatrice looked at him a little critically.

"You're a queer person, Philip," she exclaimed. "You're not fit to go out alone, really. Good thing I came over to take care of you, I think."

"You don't understand," he replied. "Miss Dalstan is—well, unlike anybody else. She wants to see you. I am to take you round after the next act, if you would like to do so."

Beatrice smiled at him in a gratified manner.

"I've always wanted to go behind the scenes," she admitted. "I'll come with you, with pleasure. Perhaps if I decide that I'd like to go on the stage, she may be able to help me. How much is twenty thousand pounds in dollars, Philip?"

"A little over a hundred thousand," he told her.

"I don't suppose they think that much out here," she went on ruminatingly. "The hotel where Mr. Dane sent me—it's nice enough, in its way, but very stuffy as regards the people—is twice as expensive as it would be in London. However, we shall see."

The curtain rang up on the third act, and Beatrice, seated well back in the shadows, followed the play attentively, appreciated its good points and had every appearance of both understanding and enjoying it. Afterwards, she rose promptly to her feet, still clapping.

"I'm longing to meet Miss Dalstan, Philip," she declared. "She is wonderful. And to think that you wrote it—that you created the part for her! I am really quite proud of you."

She laughed at his embarrassment, affecting to ignore the fact that it was less the author's modesty than some queer impulse of horror which seemed to come over him when any notice of hers reminded him of their past familiarity. He hurried on, piloting her down the corridor to the door of Elizabeth's dressing room, in response to his knock they were bidden to enter, and Elizabeth, who was lying on a couch whilst a maid was busy preparing her costume for the next act, held out her hand with a little welcoming smile.

"I am so glad to see you, Miss Wenderley," she said cordially. "Phillip, bring Miss Wenderley over here. You'll forgive my not getting up, won't you? I have to rest for just these few minutes before the next act."

A Little Mistake

Pickpocket, visiting a friend in gaol—I hired a lawyer for you this morning, Jem, but I had to hand to him my watch as a retainer, Jem—And did he? Pickpocket—He thinks he did."

The Wrong Nose

Mrs. Jenkins was reading the daily paper. Presently she exclaimed:

"What strange things these society people do, Jeremiah!"

"What's up now?" asked Jeremiah, who was half asleep.

"Well, it says here about the launching of a ship: 'With graceful ease the huge vessel slid into the water. Just after the Duchess of Dumbshire had cracked a bottle of champagne on her nose.' It must have hurt her! Why should she mutilate her face like that, Jeremiah?"

Mrs. Solomon Says—

(Being the Confessions of the Seven-Hundredth Wife)

By HELEN ROWLAND

Masculine Caprice, and Feminine Versatility

Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

"HOLA, hola, hola!" cried the Reformer. "Consider the shocking fashions of women! For each fad is more freakish than that which preceded it, and every one more foolish than that which went before.

"And all is forwardness and folly and vanity and pneumonia!

"Lo, evening gowns are sleeveless and backless, and ALMOST skirtless, and the bathing suit is but 'a scrap of paper.'

"Vamps have passed away, and sirens are no more, and the flapper and the baby doll shall soon follow after them.

"And WHAT will women do next!"

But I say unto you, my Daughter, no woman knoweth what she will do next. For she knowest not what men will demand of her!

Behold, men said:

"We are weary of the bread-and-butter damsel in muslin and blue ribbons! And she 'sweet young thing' that quototh Harold Bell Wright and singeth 'The Rosary' is as a constant diet of breakfast food!

"Give us women of understanding and experience—and a little spice!"

And lo, all the women hearkened.

And straightway they donned long ear-rings and rice-powder and sinuous draperies and sophisticated ways, and became show-girls and Lorelels and "vampires" and Kitty Gordons.

And the men were at first rejoiced; but, seeing them all ALIKE, they soon sickened, and yearned for something "wholesome and kittenish and full of youth and innocence."

And again all the women hearkened. And straightway they bobbed their hair and cut off their clinging skirts and became spunds and flappers, and "cute young things."

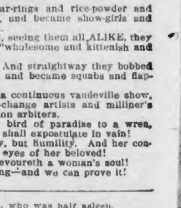
Verily, verily, so long as men demand a continuous vaudeville show, women shall never cease to be lightning-change artists and milliner's mannikins, tripping to the tune of the fashion writers.

So long as men continue to prefer a bird of paradise to a wren, preachers and prophets and health experts shall expostulate in vain!

For the curse of woman is NOT vanity, but humility. And her consuming desire is to appear beautiful in the eyes of her beloved!

Go to! Fashion is a monster which devoureth a woman's soul!

But masculine CAPRICE grow this thing—and we can prove it! Selah.



CONSTIPATION

DR. CALDWELL'S Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that quickly relieves the congestion of undigested food and poisonous waste matter, and restores the normal regularity of natural action. It does not gripe or cramp and is as safe and pleasant for children as it is effective on even the strongest constitution.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the indispensable family remedy in thousands of homes and is sold in drug stores everywhere.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there being over a million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 511 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

IF MOTHERS ONLY KNEW

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms and Their Mothers Do Not Know What the Trouble Is.

Signs of worms are: Constipation, sour stomach, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel, pale or sallow leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the private parts, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

Mrs. H. N. Roberts, 802 Asylum street, Flint, Mich., used Dr. True's Elixir for her little baby girl when she was sick. Mrs. Roberts wrote to Dr. J. F. True & Co.: "My little girl is relieved of her worms." And in a later letter wrote: "Baby is fine and I think it was your medicine (Dr. True's Elixir, True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller) that helped her." If your child is ailing start giving Dr. True's Elixir at once. Buy Dr. True's Elixir at your dealers at once. Three sizes.

How To Become Healthy, Strong, Energetic, Magnetic, and Vigorous.

Three-Grain Cadomene Tablets Advised For Their Wonderful Tonic Properties.

Don't envy the man or woman with abundant energy, vitality, and the overpresent smile of cordial magnetic personality. Begin to banish your languor, your tired, worn-out feeling, your aches and pains, your mental worry and distress, by supplying your system with plenty of iron, phosphorus, and vegetable tonics so that every organ of your body can perform its normal functions from the vigorous blood supply that course through your arteries. Tone up the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels, digest your food better and supply your nerves with the vital elements in Cadomene Tablets and you won't need to envy anyone. Just get your body and nerves working right and nature will help you do the rest. Cadomene Tablets are sold in sealed tubes by all good druggists, and are guaranteed to please you or money back.—Advertisement.

How To Avoid INFLUENZA

Nothing you can do will so effectually protect you against the influenza or Grippe epidemic as keeping your organs of digestion and elimination active and your system free from poisonous accumulations.

Doctors and health authorities everywhere are warning people of the danger of constipation and advising, and urging everyone to see that the bowels and other eliminative organs act freely and regularly.

Ordinary laxatives, purges and cathartics, salts, oils, calomel and the like are good enough to clean out the system, but do not strengthen the weakened organs; they do not build up vitality.

Why don't you begin right today to overcome constipation and get your system in such shape that you can feel reasonably sure of resisting disease. You can do so if you will just get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one each night for a while.

NR Tablets do much more than merely cause pleasant easy bowel action. This medicine acts upon the digestive as well as eliminative organs, strengthens good digestion, causes the body to get the nourishment from all the food you eat, gives you a good, hearty appetite, strengthens the liver, overcomes biliousness, regulates kidney and bowel action and gives the whole body a thorough cleaning out. This accomplished you will not have to take medicine every day. An occasional NR Tablet will keep your body in condition and you can always feel your best. Sold and recommended by druggists.

THE VALLEY OF THE GIANTS

By Peter B. Kyne

COLONEL PENNINGTON did not at once return to his home, however. Instead, he drove up to the business centre of the town. The streets were deserted, but one saloon—the Sawdust Pile—was still open.

Pennington strode through the bar and into the back room, where a number of poker-games were in progress. For a moment he stood, his cold, ophidian glance circling the room until it came to rest on no less a personage than the Black Minorca, an individual with whom the reader has already had some slight acquaintance. It will be recalled that the Black Minorca led the futile rush against Bryce Cardigan that day in Pennington's woods.

Gives Orders

The Colonel approached the table where the Black Minorca sat thumbing the edges of his cards, and touched the choio on the shoulder. The Black Minorca turned, and Pennington nodded to him to follow; whereupon the latter cashed in his chips and joined his employer on the sidewalk. Here a whispered conversation ensued, and at its conclusion the Black Minorca nodded vigorously.

"Sure!" he assured the Colonel. "I'll fix 'em good and plenty."

Together Pennington and the Black Minorca entered the automobile and proceeded swiftly to the Laguna Grande Lumber Company's mill-office. From a locker the Colonel produced a repeating rifle and three boxes of cartridges, which he handed to the choio, who departed without further ado into the night.

Twenty minutes later, from the top of a lumber-pile in Cardigan's drying yard, Bryce Cardigan saw the flash of a rifle and felt a sudden sting on his left forearm. He leaped around in front of the conveyer to gain the shelter of the engine, and another bullet struck at his feet and ricocheted off into the night. It was followed by a fusillade, the bullets kicking up the freshly disturbed earth among the workers and sending them scurrying to various points of safety. In an instant the crossing was deserted, and work had been stopped, while from the top of the adjacent lumber pile the Black Minorca poured a stream of lead and filthy invective at every point which he suspected of harboring a Cardigan follower.

"I don't think he's hurt anybody," Buck Ogilvy whispered as he crouched with Bryce beside the engine, "but that's due to his marksmanship rather than his intentions."

"He tried hard enough to plug me," Bryce declared and shoved the hole through his sleeve. "They call him the Black Minorca, and he's a mongrel greaser who'd kill his own mother for a fifty-dollar bill."

"I'd like to plug him," Buck murmured regretfully.

"What would be the use? This will be his last night in Humboldt County."

A rifle shot rang out from the side of B street; from the lumberpile across the street Bryce and Ogilvy heard a suppressed grunt of pain and a crash as of a breaking board. Instantly out of the shadows George Sea Otter came paddling on velvet feet, rifle in hand—and then Bryce understood.

CHAPTER XXXI.

HAVING dispatched the Black Minorca to hold up the work until the arrival of reinforcements, Colonel Pennington fairly burned the streets en route to his home. He realized that there would be no more sleep for him that night, and he was desirous of getting into a heavy ulster before venturing forth again in the night air.

The violent slam with which he closed the front door after him brought Shirley, in dressing-gown and slippers, to the staircase.

"Uncle Beth!" she called.

"Here!" he replied from the hall below.

"What's the matter?"

"There's the devil to pay," he answered. "That fellow Cardigan is back of the N. C. O. after all, and he and Ogilvy have a gang of fifty men down at the intersection of Water and B streets, cutting in a jump-crossing of our line."

He dashed into the living room, and she heard him calling frantically into the telephone.

"At last!" she murmured, and crept down the stairs, pausing behind the heavy portieres at the entrance to the living room.

"That you, Foundstone?" she heard him saying rapidly into the transmitter. "Pennington speaking. Young Bryce Cardigan is behind that N. C. O. outfit, and it's a logging-road and not intended to build through to Grant's Pass at all. Cardigan and Ogilvy are at Water and B streets this very instant with a gang of fifty men cutting in a jump-crossing of my line, curse them! They'll have it in by 6 o'clock tomorrow morning if something isn't done—and once they get it in, the fat's in the fire.

"Telephone the chief of police and order him to take his entire force down there, if necessary, and stop that work. To blazes with that temporary franchise! You stop that work for two hours, and I'll do the rest. Tell the chief of police not to recognize that temporary franchise. He can be suspicious of it, can't he, and refuse to let the work go on until he finds you? And you can be hard to find for two hours, can you not? Delay, delay, man! That's all I want. . . . Yes, yes, I understand. You get down about daylight and roast the chief of police for interfering, but in the meantime! . . . Thank you, Foundstone, thank you. Good-bye."

He stood at the telephone, the receiver still held to his ear and his right forefinger holding down the hook while the line cleared. When he spoke again Shirley knew he was calling his mill office. He got a response immediately, notwithstanding the lateness of the hour.

Phones Sexton

"Sexton? Pennington speaking. I've sent over the Black Minorca with a rifle and sixty rounds of ammunition. . . . What? You can hear him shooting already? Bully boy with a crockery eye! He'll clean that gang out and keep them from working until the police arrive. You've telephoned Rondeau, have you? . . . Good! He'll have his men waiting at the log-landing, and there'll be no delay. As soon as you've seen the switch engine started for the woods, meet me down at Water and B streets. Sexton, we've got to block them. It means a loss of millions to me if we fail!"

Shirley was standing in the doorway as he faced about from the telephone. "Uncle Beth," she said quietly, "use any honorable method of defeating Bryce Cardigan, but call off the Black Minorca. I shall hold you personally responsible for Bryce Cardigan's life, and if you fail me, I shall never forgive you."

"All right, all right!" he said rather humbly, and sprang down the front steps into the waiting car. "I'll play the game fairly, Shirley, never fear."

She stood in the doorway and watched the red tail-light, like a malevolent eye, disappear down the street. And presently as she stood there, down the boulevard a huge gray car came gliding noiselessly—so noiselessly, in fact, that Shirley recognized it by the very quality of silence. It was Bryce Cardigan's Napier.

"George!" she called. "Come here."

The car slid over to the gate and stopped at the sight of the slim white figure running down the garden walk.

"Is Mr. Cardigan hurt?" she demanded in an agony of suspense.

Shirley Meets George

George Sea Otter grunted contemptuously. "Nobody hurt 'cept the Black Minorca. I am taking him to your company hospital, miss. He tried to shoot my boss, so I shoot him myself once through the leg. Now my boss says: 'Take him to the Laguna Grande Hospital, George.' Me, I would cut this greaser in the bay if I was the boss."

She laughed hysterically. "On your way back from the hospital stop and pick me up, George," she ordered. "This senseless feud has gone far enough. I must stop it—at once."

Manufacturing Silver

Mining in proven silver ore bodies is manufacturing the article most needed all over the world. It is today the most profitable industry. There is now a demand for more silver than can be produced. When you buy shares in an actual silver mine you buy an interest in an immense mass of Silver in the ground that will pay you large profits as it is taken out. Let us send you details of a mine now shipping high grade silver ore.

Oil and Motor Issues Show Large Losses in an Active Market

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak at noon in New York, being but little above the lowest morning level. The second hour improvement was followed by a reaction. Rails led the upward movement, the stronger being Southern Pacific, New eYrk Central and New Haven. Union Pacific partially recovered its early decline, closing 1½ points off. Rails failed to hold all gains. The market was active during the first hour, when transactions totalled around 300,000 shares. Call money renewed at 7 per cent. Sterling exchange weakness, demand sterling slumping 74 cents to 3.75¾ at the opening.

Weakest stocks during the morning included Crucible, Republic, Studebaker, Chandler, Texas Co., Pan-American, Middle States, Endicott Johnson, Marine preferred, Atlantic Gulf, Woolen preferred and Royal Dutch. These stocks were off from three to ten points at their lowest.

SOLD OFF AT OPENING.

Opening lower, the market quickly receded further. Orders to sell accumulated over Sunday and demand for stocks had diminished. The tone was nervous and unsettled this morning. Early losses ranged from fractions to nearly ten points. Motors were especially weak. General Motors leading the decline. As opened four points below Saturday's final quotation and continued to descend. Mexican Petroleum started more than five points lower and weakened more. Oils dropped about as far as motors. Steels ruled lower at the outset and afterwards. Equipments receded, with Baldwin in the van. But little was done in rails or coppers, but they eased off. Shipping shares figured in the slump. Gains were few and small. Trading was confined largely to motors, oils and steels. The covering movement appeared to be over. It was credited with having the most to do with the week-end advance. The upturn then served to change the technical aspect of the market.

FOREIGN SITUATION DUBIOUS.

Reports as to Washington developments concerning foreign affairs caused concern on Wall Street. Statements that President Wilson might withdraw from participation in European affairs caused quite some fear to what effect such a change of policy would have on export trade, which is already handicapped by low record exchange rates. In financial districts it is believed that domestic and international politics will be more regarded as dubious, to say the least. The turn taken by the market at the opening was contrary to expectations. It was generally believed that the rally in security prices would continue.

BANK STATEMENTS NOT GOOD.

Bank statements were a disappointment. While that by New York Clearing House members showed a reduction of $58,074,000 in loans, surplus reserve decreased $3,769,320. The New York Federal Reserve Bank reported a decline in reserve ratio from 39.7 per cent. to 34.9 per cent., while its ratio of gold reserve to notes dropped from 42.9 per cent. to 42.6 per cent.

Washington reports that during the week ended Friday last national bank note circulation decreased $154,847 and that Federal Reserve Bank note circulation decreased $1,080,000.

Attleboro Awards Loan

RECEDE AFTER FIRM START

Boston Prices Affected by New York Reaction; Mixed Changes on Curb

After a firm opening prices on the Boston Stock Exchange receded somewhat and the market became irregular within the first hour. The recession in New York had a weakening influence upon the Boston market, where trading was dull and the range narrow. United Fruit advanced nearly a point at the opening, but lost all of it before mid-morning. Superior & Boston was the active mining issue and advanced a fraction. Trading was almost devoid of interest. It had no feature during the forenoon.

Among stocks to decline a point or more were Alloues, Eastern Manufacturing, Swift & Co., Mexican Investments, Anoskeag, and Gray and Davis. Utah Apex Mining Co. was shown by Boston & Maine, Old Dominion, Pond Creek, U. S. Smelting, Vernon Hill, Utah Copper, Shannon, Root and Van Dervoort and Waldorf Clothing. Wright-Martin advanced a point and smaller gains were made by Maytlower-Old Colony, Davis Daly, United Shoe, National Leather, Elder, Bickheart, Waltham Watch and Utah Consolidated.

CURB TRADING QUIET.

The curb market had a quiet start and with the price trend mixed. Universal Silvers, the most active issue on Saturday, fell back with a 3-cent advance to 55 cents, but quickly lost it. Strong stocks at the start were Hecla Mining, Ohio Copper, Root and Van Dervoort and Waldorf Clothing. Wright-Martin advanced a point and smaller gains were made by Mayflower-Old Colony, Davis Daly, United Shoe, National Leather, Elder, Bickheart, Waltham Watch and Utah Consolidated.

CURB TRADING QUIET.

The curb market had a quiet start and with the price trend mixed. Universal Silvers, the most active issue on Saturday, fell back with a 3-cent advance to 55 cents, but quickly lost it. Strong stocks at the start were Hecla Mining, Ohio Copper, and Atlas Tack. There were more issues to show weakness than strength during the forenoon. Weak stocks at the opening were Gulfport, Pilgrim, Pioneer, Texada Verde Mines and United Verde Extension.

At 11 o'clock Silver Reef was up 1 cents at 22 cents and Atlas Tack 1-8 at 21¾, while Verde Mines was off 2 cents at 23 cents and Texada 5 cents at 28 cents. Pilgrim, Arizona Silver, Pioneer and Universal Silvers were unchanged. Very little business was done in high-priced oils during the morning. Business was confined mostly to no-so-called penny issues.

KELLEY TIRE COMPANY AWARDS PLANT CONTRACT

The contract for building a new plant at West Haven, Conn., for the Kelley Tire & Rubber Co. has been awarded to Charles E. Hadden of Newark, N. J. His bid was $259,105 for the entire plant, which will consist of a tire factory, spreader building and office. Completion in June is expected. Other bidders were the Industrial Engineering Co., the William M Bailey Co. and the Stanwood Engineering Corp., all of Boston. The contract was awarded at a special meeting of the directorate of the Kelley Co. at the Hotel Bristol, in West Haven, which was attended by President Edward J. Kelley, vice-president Charles Bartoldi, Major William F. Alcorn, secretary and general counsel, J. N. Smith of Canterbury, and Charles Desmond of New Haven.

Factory Manager Raymond F. Throsby reported that full equipment and machinery for making 1,000 tires and 5,000 tubes daily will be on hand and ready for installation as soon as the factory is completed. The company now has 60 orders for large amount of business awaiting completion of the new plant, its present product being supplied through contract with other factories.

Treasurer Bortell reported that the company has sufficient funds on hand to cover the entire cost of the new plant and all equipment and is extending its sales and service stations as business warrants. It has leased a New York salesroom at No. 1656 Broadway.

Strikes in England

Regarding strikes in England, Herbert N. Casson says in the Boston News Bureau: "Last year the industrial and financial structure in Britain suffered several heavy blows. There were 1500 strikes, with a loss of 25,000,000 working days. There was an increase of $1,100,000,000 in wages and a decrease of time, the shortened hours of labor, amounting to 170,000 years."

More Cotton Exported

The slump in foreign exchange rates to record low figures has not diminished foreign buying of American cotton, although Europeans are forced to pay much higher prices. The Census Bureau at Washington reports that January, 1920, cotton exports amounted to 928,674 running bales, while January, 1919, exports totalled 658,143 bales.

SIX MORE GET GOAT GLANDS

Boston Man Among Patients Operated on by Dr. Brinkley

Milford, Kan., Feb. 16.—Dr. J. R. Brinkley, the surgeon who gained country-wide attention by announcing he had successfully transplanted interstitial glands of goats in men and women, admitted that during last week he had performed six operations of this kind. The patients came from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coasts, the doctor said.

"I cannot give the names of my patients because it would not be ethical," Dr. Brinkley said, "but I operated on a St. Louis man, a woman from Salt Lake and a man from Chicago Saturday. They are all prominent people and the operations have apparently been successful."

Dr. Brinkley said he had received patients from Boston, New York, Los Angeles, San Diego and a score of other cities throughout the country. His hospital, Dr. Brinkley said, is limited to twenty-nine patients and a waiting list has been established. Most of the patients now at the hospital, he said, came without previous correspondence.

"They simply get on the train and came, trusting to luck in being admitted," he said. "We are threatened with more patients than we can possibly give attention."

Dr. Brinkley said no unfavorable results followed any of the operations.

"The glands of a fertile female goat were used in the operation on the women patient from Salt Lake the past week," Dr. Bringley said, "in the operation on the men only the glands of the male goats were used."

$10,000,000 FUR SALE STIRS NEW YORK TODAY

New York, Feb. 16.—Are you interested in obtaining some of the fur of the genesis, or the viscacha, or the guanaco, or even the wallaroo, or the wombat? If you are you will probably be able to find what you are looking for at the fur sale in the Masonic Hall Auditorium today. The total value of the collection of skins offered for sale, according to the press agent, is $10,000,000.

A. TOXEN WORM TO RUN SHUBERT'S THEATRES

A. Toxen Worm, manager of the Boston Opera House, has been appointed to succeed S. D. Smith as representative of all the Shubert theatres in Boston, according to an announcement by J. J. Shubert. The theatres include the Shubert, Plymouth, Majestic and Boston Opera House. Mr. Smith is in ill health and will go to Southern California. Mr. Smith declines to comment on his resignation.

Moral Sentiment of Nation Will Revolt if Ship Deal Is Sanctioned by Wilson

Can any public servant or politician in Washington, or any intelligent citizen anywhere, be in doubt what the moral and patriotic sentiment of the people everywhere will be about the proposed German ship deal? The facts are these:

FIRST—The thirty German ships constitute the finest fleet in the world. They now belong to the United States Government. They are worth, at the very least, one hundred million dollars.

SECOND—The United States Shipping Board proposes to sell them to an Anglo-Wall Street syndicate for $28,000,000.

THIRD—The Anglo-Wall Street syndicate's own fleet is far inferior to the German fleet. But it is capitalized at $154,600,000.

FOURTH—The Anglo-Wall Street syndicate, called the International Mercantile Marine, speculates in ships, operates under the British flag, and has a British chairman for its board. This syndicate made as much as one hundred million dollars' profit out of the war in a single year. Most of this profit was paid to the British treasury as excess profits tax, because nine-tenths of the syndicate's ships sail under British registry.

FIFTH—The International Mercantile Marine syndicate was organized by J. P. Morgan & Company. Its contract and by-laws require that its ships shall have British officers, British crews, and shall belong to the Royal Naval Reserve of Great Britain.

SIXTH—John Barton Payne is now the head of the United States Shipping Board, which proposes to sell the German fleet for about one-third of its value to the syndicate. Mr. Payne was general counsel for about thirty-five railroad and other corporations in which J. P. Morgan & Company are interested.

The net profits of the Anglo-Wall Street syndicate from the British fleet it now operates have averaged, after paying British war taxes, in the past five years more than $21,000,000 a year. They have been as high, after war taxes, as $33,000,000 a year.

If President Wilson does not forbid the deal between his Shipping Board and the Anglo-Wall Street syndicate, the syndicate will thus obtain the finest fleet in the world for less than the profits of the syndicate in a single year from its inferior fleet.

Will President Wilson permit such a transaction? Is it not a concrete example of that kind of government by capitalistic syndicates which Mr. Wilson himself denounced when he said that "such invisible government often exerts a greater power than the real government"?

In the present fleet owned by the Anglo-Wall Street syndicate there are twenty-two ships of less than 6,000 tons.

In the superb German fleet there are only four ships as small as 6,000 tons.

Many of the Wall Street syndicate ships are from twenty to thirty years old.

Most of the German ships are new. The Anglo-Wall Street syndicate has in its entire fleet only one ship capable of making twenty knots an hour.

The German fleet contains six of the greatest and fastest ships in the world, eight more than twenty knots speed.

The seven best capital ships of the two fleets compare as follows:

INTERNATIONAL MERCANTILE MARINE.		GERMAN FLEET
Name of Ship	Tonnage	Name of Ship	Tonnage
Olympic	46,359	Vaterland	54,281
Adriatic	24,541	George Washington	25,869
Baltic	23,876	Kronprinzessin Cecilia	25,070
Cedric	21,039	Amerika	22,621
Celtic	20,900	Kaiser Wilhelm	19,360
Lapland	18,565	President Grant	18,172
Megantic	14,878	Kronprinz Wilhelm	15,000
	170,158		180,073

Chairman Payne, of the Shipping Board, said in a letter to the Senate yesterday that a condition of the sale of the German ships will be that they shall fly the American flag.

What is the precise value of such a guarantee given by a company which in its eighteen years of existence has always been controlled by a British Board of Directors, with a British chairman (required by the by-laws of the company), with British officers for nine-tenths of its ships (required by its contract with the British Admiralty), with British crews (stipulated in the contract), and fifty-six of whose ships were taken over by the British Government as a part of the Royal Naval Reserve at the outbreak of the late war?

On which side of the Atlantic do you think these great ships would be if the British chairman of the company was advised by his government that there was a possibility of trouble with the United States.

Chairman Payne also stated in Washington yesterday as the only other reason for selling the superb German ships that our government "would probably not be able to operate passenger ships under prohibition successfully in competition with foreign ships which sell liquor."

If 110,000,000 Americans by choice live and prosper under prohibition, we think an American merchant marine can survive under prohibition. We do not believe that the morals and habits of the American people are different on the sea than on the land.

If it is necessary to sell American ships, or to operate them under the British flag, for the sake of the profits of the barroom, why not put one or two of our States under the British flag also for the profits of the liquor traffic?

The Anglo-Wall Street syndicate has already received great and not always deserved favors from our government. As an inducement to it to operate "four first class vessels with weekly sailings from New York under the American flag" our government made a contract to pay $300,000 a year for carrying the mails.

Its four American ships, the St. Paul, the St. Louis, the New York and the Philadelphia, are now from twenty-five to thirty-five years old. They long ceased to be first class steamships. The mails for many years have been intrusted to faster and better ships, as every one knows. But the government continues to pay the Anglo-Wall Street syndicate $300,000 a year! That five-year contract, renewed in 1915 by Postmaster Burleson, expires next October!

It is obviously the duty of our government to retain the best ships of the superb German fleet and operate them either by an A.L.

Put It There to Stay

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

AMERICAN company, or by our own naval officers and crews that did so well with them during the war.

Mr. Hurley, the former chairman of the Shipping Board, arranged six months ago regular sailings for some of these ships between New York and South American ports, which would give a fast service to that part of the world in which our trade has become paramount in the past four years.

It seems to be Chairman Payne's intention to abandon this program to British shipping companies when he turns over the German fleet to the Anglo-Wall Street syndicate now operating under the British flag.

No sullen threat or misrepresentation by "Red" Socialists or Anarchists about the secret power of capitalistic syndicates over our government is one-half as shocking to the moral sentiment of the nation as this sacrifice of the PUBLIC PROPERTY OF THE UNITED STATES will be if President Wilson allows it to go through.

What Is the Matter With the New Haven R. R.?

The Boston American wishes to congratulate the managements of the Boston & Albany and Boston & Maine railroad systems for their splendid efforts in handling traffic during the recent blizzard under most adverse conditions.

These old Massachusetts roads rose nobly to the stress the rigors of the Winter placed upon them. True there were delays and inconveniences suffered by patrons, but these were excusable and borne with patience. Their patrons felt that these two railroads were doing their utmost to restore their normal schedules and were achieving a measure of success.

In marked contrast was the complete breakdown of the New Haven system. Days after the Boston & Albany and Boston & Maine railroads had straightened out their schedules, the New Haven was lumbering along, its patrons unable to reach their homes at all through the agency of this alien railroad.

And to its lamentable performance the New Haven adds the entirely unjustifiable excuse that it was unable to clear its tracks BECAUSE ITS SNOWPLOWS WERE DEAD-ENDED ON SIDINGS BEHIND LONG LINES OF SNOWED-IN FREIGHT CARS.

It is difficult to follow the mental processes of a railroad operating official who would give such an example of carelessness and shiftlessness as an excuse for mismanagement. One could conceive of an official admitting such bungling under the pressure of hostile cross-examination. But that he should voluntarily offer it in palliation of his inefficiency is amazing.

The blizzard did not come without warning and failure to have all of its snow-removing equipment ready for use from the moment that snow began to fall was inexcusable on the part of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad management.

There is a very strong suspicion felt in New England that the management of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has, DELIBERATELY AND BY INTENT, permitted the service on its lines to break down, time and again, in order to discredit government ownership of railroads. This suspicion is shared by men who do not themselves favor government ownership, but who condemn what appears to them to be unfair treatment of the public by this railroad.

By K. C. B.

Dear K. C. B.: I have a beautiful daughter by the name of Delmar, eight years old. She is considered by strangers to be good looking and rather smart for her age, but she has one fault, and that is she is wild. She has had a lot of sickness, even the flu, and it has left her with a leakage of the heart. The doctors tell me that the only cure is for her to be quiet. But I can't keep her quiet. She is full of life as all children should be, and I don't know what to do with her.

I love her as a father should, and I want you please to advise me. She loves to read your writings, and I thought perhaps you could write something that would make her sit up and take notice.

Truly yours,
I. S. BLAUGRUND.

1015 White place, Utica, N. Y.

MY DEAR Delmar.
BECAUSE YOUR daddie.
ASKED ME to do it.
I'M WRITING this letter.
BUT I'VE no idea.
WHAT I'M going to say.
EXCEPT TO tell you.
THAT YOU ought to be good
AND VERY quiet.
AND GET all well.
SO THAT your daddie.
WON'T HAVE to worry.
AND YOU must remember.
THAT IN all the world.
THERE ISN'T a thing.
THAT IS quite so grand
AS A little girl.
OR A little boy.
IN SOMEBODY'S home.
AND THERE isn't a grief.
IN ALL the world.
THAT IS quite so deep.
AS WHEN something happens.
TO THE little girl.
OR THE little boy.
AND BECAUSE of that.
AND BECAUSE I know.
THAT YOU love your daddie.
I'M GOING to ask you.
TO WRITE me a letter.
AND PROMISE me.
THAT YOU'LL take his hand.
AND CROSS your heart.
AND PROMISE him.
THAT WHATEVER he says.
YOU OUGHT to do.
YOU'LL SURELY do.
AND I can remember.
THAT ONCE on a time.
WE HAD a happy boy.
AND HE broke his leg.
AND THE doctor put it
IN A plaster cast.
AND TIED it all up.
WITH A lot of sticks.
BUT HE wouldn't be quiet.
AND WE had to take him.
AND HANG him up.
IN A sort of swing.
WHERE HIS little legs.
COULDN'T TOUCH the ground.
AND HE had to stay there.
TILL HIS leg got well.
AND YOU'D best be careful.
OR FIRST thing you know.
THEY'LL HANG you up.

THANK you.

INFLUENZA AND HOW IT SHOULD BE TREATED

By Dr. H. S. Jelalian

AGAIN our traditional friend (or enemy), Influenza, has been sweeping over some of our larger cities, notably New York, Chicago and Boston, and prostrating hundreds of people who have been caught napping in their struggle for existence.

Healthy Living

Because of the superior achievements of medical science in coming to our rescue, there seems to be a growing tendency among the people to be careless concerning the old-fashioned homely virtues of healthy living which is simply sapping the vital powers of the present generation. How can a person, man or woman, be healthy who moves about with an overloaded stomach, thus continuously poisoning himself or herself from within by auto-intoxication? The secret of perfect health is in the maintenance of the equilibrium of the circulation of the blood. Hyperemia in one part means anaemia in another part: that is, too much blood in one part and too little in another. That is why it is essential that the temperature of the body should be equable.

The Treatment

As to the treatment, it is prophylactic and also medicinal. The former will to a large extent depend upon the serum, for the perfection of which we are anxiously waiting. As to the medicinal treatment, under all circumstances whenever you feel cold and weak go to bed and call for your doctor. If your physician cannot at once be at your bedside, you can utilize those minutes by doing certain things which will shorten your disease.

Take a teaspoonful of epsom salts in a tumbler of warm water and thus wash the debris out of the tubes. If the doctor has not yet arrived, take a glassful of hot water, squeeze half a lemon into it, add two teaspoonfuls of brandy (if you can get it) and one teaspoonful of sugar, and drink it while it is hot. This is a good family medicine to check the force of primary inflammation. An initial dose of five grains of Doner's Powder will allay your muscular pains and may produce a refreshing sleep which is better than any medicine that your doctor can give.

Put your feet in a pail of hot mustard bath, which enlarges the arteries of the lower extremities and takes away so much blood from the inflamed congested area. Of course, you will see to it that the air of your room is fresh and warm, free from dust and dampness.

BOY REBUILT BY ARMY PUZZLES GIRL

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

THERE was a story in one of the magazines not long ago of a "war bride," who on the return of her soldier husband discovered to her consternation that he no longer seemed like the same "Jim" who had gone away. In spite of herself, she shrank from him as if he were a stranger.

This must have happened in many instances. The world does not stand still with any of us; we unconsciously alter in both manners and character under the influence of changed conditions. And especially is this likely to be true of those boys and girls who went to the other side. They could hardly fail to show the impress of the tremendous experiences through which they passed. Coming back, they must often seem hardly recognizable even to their families and closest friends.

A girl who has written me is confronted by a situation of this sort and finds herself sorely puzzled how to meet it. She is only eighteen, but says, as I can readily believe from her letter, that she is usually taken to be much older. She holds the position of secretary to a New York lawyer and earns a salary of twenty-two dollars a week.

She is, I gather, an attractive and capable girl—she says herself that she is domestic in her tastes and can both sew and cook—and she could probably have many chances to marry. But she has never cared for but one young man. It is a boy and girl romance between them, extending back to the time when she wore her hair down her back and he was in short trousers.

Loud and Independent

At the outbreak of the war he enlisted, although only a little over seventeen years old, and spent three years in the army, seeing active service with the famous Third Division and being stationed for eighteen months in France and Germany.

Naturally she is very proud of this record, and she admits that he is a steady, hard-working chap of excellent habits and character; yet ever since his return she has been conscious of an alteration in her feelings regarding him.

"No matter how hard I try," she says, "I can't seem able to get used to him. He is so changed. Everything about him seems different. Before he went away he was very dignified and refined in his manner, but now he is just the opposite. He seems to have lost his dignity in every respect. He is often rough and uncouth in his ways, and his tone in speaking is loud and ungentlemanly. When anyone attempts to correct these faults his answer is, 'I don't care.' And, indeed, that expresses his general attitude.

"He has no father or mother, both of them having died when he was a baby; and while he was in France he also lost his grandmother who was everything to him. He is at present living with his aunts, but they are unable to exert any influence upon him, and tell me that I am the only one who can make him mend his ways.

"I am a girl who his always been treated with respect, and I do not propose to lower my position by going with anyone who practices the 'I-don't-care habit. Yet, if I quit him he will give up all his plans of finishing his trade and keeping to the straight path.

"I love him dearly regardless of his faults, but even if I were old enough I would not marry him now unless he changes his ways, because I know it would mean unhappiness for me. I feel that I have waited for him two years in vain.

"Should I try to break him of his present habits by persuasion and coaxing, or should I just tell him plainly how I feel about him and see what happens? Ought I not to try and help him, knowing that he loves me better than he does himself, and since he has no one else to influence or guide him?"

Patience Will Clear Air

My dear young lady, repose and dignity of manner and softness of speech are very excellent qualities, no doubt, but they certainly didn't win the war against Germany.

"Treat 'em rough!" was the watchword over there, and it was the splendid, "I don't care" spirit of the American doughboy that carried our flag to victory. He met privations, mud, difficulties of every sort with a grin, and fought on just the same.
